FRIENDS SEARCH HILLS FOR PROSPECTOR.

Fears Entertained for Safety of Well-Known Colorado Springs Man.

Completed mystery surrounds the disappearance three weeks ago of Andrew J. James, who left his home at 707 North Weber street for a prospecting trip into the mountains and who has not been seen or heard of by any member of his family since the afternoon of June 27.

A searching party made up of friends of the family and prospectors near Rock Creek canon, where James was last seen alive, has been looking for the missing man since Friday morning. Up to midnight last night no word had been received either from James or those who are scouring the mountain slopes and canons for him. Rock Creek canon is about 12 miles southwest of Colorado Springs, near the new state highway to Canon City, and James' claim on Black Mountain is five miles back in the hills.

Mrs. James and her daughters are almost prostrated with grief and friends of the family fear that there may be a tragic ending to the search for the prospector who has thus far failed to apprise them of his whereabouts.

James has been prospecting on Black Mountain for the last three years, and his frequent trips into the hills has never before failed to send his wife letters or messages telling her of his safety.

When he set out three weeks ago he carried, as was his custom, a stamped envelope addressed to Mrs. James, with the purpose of advising her if his stay at the little cabin in Rock Creek canon would be longer than usual.

No word has been received, and it is feared that he has met with a serious accident or was the victim of foul play. Recently he suffered two attacks of appendicitis, and it is considered a possibility that he was seized with another attack when alone in the mountains.

James was to have taken a train with a party of other prospectors for Canon City on the morning of June 27. He missed the train, however, and the others went on without him. The James claim on Black Mountain is five miles from the railway station.

On the afternoon of June 27, James reached the mouth of the canon and talked with ranchmen near by. That was the last seen of him. Miss Roma James, a daughter, has a cabin in the canon, and a day later when Robert Wilson, another member of the prospecting party, was there, expecting to find James, the place was in disorder. Clothing known to have belonged to the girl's father was found scattered about the room, but there was no trace of James. Days later, when the cabin was visited again, cobwebs were found across the door and over the mouth of the little spring which supplied the household. During the stay of James' friends in the hills, other visits were made to the cabin, but the place always was deserted.

Friday morning, Mrs. James was unable to withstand the fears she entertained for her husband's safety, and a number of friends, among whom were Robert Willy, Roy Grier and Fred Broage, started for Rock Creek canon. Others searchers were picked up along the way, and the hunt in the mountains has been in progress since early Friday afternoon.

James is 47 years old, and with the exception of the two attacks of appendicitis recently, has been in good health. He came here four years ago from Galesburg, Ill., where he was a large landholder, and golded to make his home in Colorado Springs. He is a member of the Elks, Odd Fellows and Masonic lodges and other fraternal societies here, although he is not actively engaged in any commercial pursuit.

James' disappearance has caused much concern in the community, and his friends are doing everything possible to locate him.

The first passenger train to run over the new line departed from the union station at 8 a. m.

CHICAGO MINISTER IS CHARGED WITH HERESY

DES MONIES, Ia., July 15.—Heresy charges against the Rev. Guy W. Sarvis, assistant pastor of the Hyde Park Church of Christ, Chicago, were considered by a committee from the board of foreign missions for the Disciples of Christ in America in secret session here today. Mr. Sarvis is the newly appointed professor of sociology at the University of Northern Iowa. At the close of the session no announcement as to the decision was made.

Officers of the American Federation of Labor, who, in answer to a ruling issued by Justice Daniel T. Wright of the district supreme court in Washington, will appear before him tomorrow to show cause why they should not be adjudged guilty of contempt of court. This action followed the filing of the report of the special committee of attorneys appointed by Justice Wright to inquire into the matter of contempt proceedings in the Bucks store and range boycott case.

The officers are: President Samuel Gompers (on the right), Secretary Frank Morrison (on the left) and, inserted, John Mitchell, vice president.

American Ambassador Denies Vigorous Steps at New York

Report of Unpatriotic Conduct on Exile

MEXICO CITY, July 15.—Moved by public accounts of alleged unpatriotic conduct at a recent independence breakfast, attended by President de la Huerta, several members of his cabinet and many leading Mexicans and Americans, Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson today authorized the following statement:

"Telegrams appeared on July 5 and 6 in many American papers, reporting that at the breakfast which followed the Fourth of July exercises the American ambassador, Mr. Wilson, failed to respond with the customary recognition when the American national air was played, and that he rose to his feet after everyone else had done so. 'This story is entirely without foundation; no such incident occurred, and no conversation on the subject took place and the first news to the Mexican public that there was a charge of such indecorous conduct came with the arrival of the American papers containing the telegram.'

Was First to Rise. "When the national air was played the ambassador was the first to rise to his feet in compliment to the president. These articles which have been sent to the American press from Mexico are purely malicious inventions and in no way reflect the opinions and sentiments of the American people in Mexico."

The ambassador makes this statement not because he believes the public is interested in his affairs but as the only means in his power of correcting unjust and untruthful attacks calculated to affect the usefulness of the American embassy in this capital."

The telegrams referred to by the ambassador related what purported to be a conversation between himself and President de la Barra in which Mr. Wilson was quoted as saying that inasmuch as they were eating he saw no need for them to rise. In consequence, it was said, a movement had been started by the American colony to bring about the ambassador's recall. The Mexican Herald, commenting on the story, said that "a hundred gentlemen who attended the breakfast, know that no such thing happened."

Madero, Surprised by Number of Followers Bearing Arms, Decides to Act Quickly.

PUEBLA, Mex., July 15.—Professing surprise at the many Maderistas he found yet bearing arms and realizing the danger of maintaining and undisciplined army in time of peace, Francisco I. Madero has determined upon a policy of immediate disarmament. He said today the work of mustering out revolutionary forces would be started at once and would be prosecuted vigorously until Mexico has but one army.

Madero said his chief object in going to Mexico instead of continuing to Tehuacan was to supervise the mustering out of the forces. It is believed that the battle in Puebla was started by shots fired by young men of the town on both the barracks of the federales and headquarters of Maderistas.

TO MAN WRIGHT PLANES AT THE CARNIVAL.

Other Spectacular Features Planned, Including Parade.

"Like the hardy old bucks who crossed the plains in prairie schooners, we are going to reach Pike's Peak or bust."

In this picturesque language Orville Wright, the famous aviator, sums up the determination of his bird-men to conquer Pike's Peak in their aeroplanes, in a letter to George B. Tripp, chairman of the carnival committee. The Wrights will be here with two of their most expert aviators for a series of flights on Wednesday and Thursday, August 2 and 3, during carnival week, and Mr. Wright says that their determination to fly over Pike's Peak or at least "encircle it at an altitude that will make all other bird-men look sick, has been reached after careful thought and much special preparation."

The faith of the Wright aviators in their ability to accomplish the apparently impossible feat is pinned to the new model aeroplanes built specially for high altitude work after plans embodying the latest ideas of the Wright brothers. The machine will be given its first demonstration in public in Colorado Springs, and in honor of the fact that it will be the first to attempt the Pike's Peak "circle trip," has been named "The Pike." While the Wrights have been keeping secret away of the details of construction embodied in the new model, they have stated in general that it is the fastest, strongest and most easily handled machine ever turned out. It is somewhat smaller than the old models, and its wings are capable of standing one-half more tension than ever was calculated for any previous aeroplanes. For this reason, and because the wings can be warped to a greater degree than those of the old type, the new machine can be turned at an angle one-third that required by any other aircraft known. The advantage of this to the aviator in a high and gusty wind may be readily imagined.

Parade and Turpin Coming. Orville Wright is confident that "The Pike" will attract the attention of its builders, and an enthusiastic crowd of aviators over the city, but that there is keen competition among them as to who shall come to the avia-

NAVAL AER PLANE... Machine Built to Meet Special Designs Proves Worth in Three-Hour Flight.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The naval aeroplane Triad, built to meet the special designs of the navy department, is being operated with success. Captain Chambers, in charge of naval aeronautics, received a telegram today from Hammoudport that Lieutenant Ellison flew for three hours yesterday in the Triad, starting from land and lighting in water. The feat is much more difficult than a flight in an ordinary aeroplane, as the Triad, designed for use on land or water, is supplied with wheels and heavy floats, adding greatly to its weight. It is proposed to make all water flights in this aeroplane from Annapolis to Washington over Chesapeake bay and the Potomac river as soon as it is thoroughly tried out.

This or another machine of the same type will make practice flights between the battleships of the Atlantic fleet during the fall gun practice off the Virginia capes.

MEMBERS STATE... Will Collect Evidence Relative to Express Rates at Chicago Session, July 27.

CHICAGO, July 15.—A special committee of railroad commissioners from the states that have railroad and utilities commissions, will meet here July 27 to collect evidence relative to express rates throughout the country, according to an announcement today by Charles Stahler, member of the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission.

The meeting was decided upon at a conference of railroad commissioners several weeks ago. The committee will prepare a report on the desirability of greater co-operation between the several state commissions and the interstate commerce commission.

The committee will hear all parties who desire to appear to give testimony or offer suggestions generally regarding railroad or express companies.

BRAVE GIRL DROWNS WHILE TRYING TO RESCUE FRIEND

EVANSVILLE, Ind., July 15.—In an attempt to save her friend, Anna Griffith from drowning, while they were bathing in the Ohio river at Cypress Beach today, Bonnie Waldon, 21 years old, was drowned. Miss Griffith was rescued by Hamilton Hopkins in a gasoline launch but he could not reach "Bonnie."

JOHN W. GATES.

PARIS, July 15.—John W. Gates was said by his physicians to be somewhat improved tonight. They added, however, that he was still in a very serious condition.

Yesterday's conference between the City Council and the Stratton trustees, regarding the paving controversy, failed to bring the two sides to an agreement. Another meeting will be held tomorrow afternoon, at which time the officials of the street car company say they will have a definite proposition to make to the city. The delay in coming to a settlement yesterday was due largely to the absence of Tyson S. Dines, one of the trustees, who went to Denver to undergo an operation.

Dr. D. H. Rice, president of the Colorado Springs and Interurban Railway company, expressed the opinion that an amicable settlement will be reached at tomorrow's conference, and the same opinion is entertained by city officials.

"We do not want to block anything that is for the benefit of the community," said Dr. Rice, "but we do want to avoid, if possible, a mistake that might prove serious. In any event, we want to see the question settled without injustice to any party concerned. If the people are bent on paving, they probably will have it, and the questions we have to consider are those of material, cost, maintenance and construction. The street car company, under certain conditions, might find it more economical to lay its own portion of the paving, and we might also find that different material from that decided upon by the Council would be better on our portion of the street."

"We are still firmly convinced that our natural streets, properly graded, oiled and cared for, would be much more satisfactory than asphalt paving to this city. Paving will result in greater dust, more heat and less sanitary conditions in the business district, and the increased noise from traffic will be an annoyance. To keep the streets properly clean will mean a great outlay of money, and experience shows that asphalt wears out rapidly and has to be constantly patched."

Tells of Meeting MacVeagh. Governor Deneen testified that when he responded to Secretary MacVeagh's request to call at the federal building in Chicago, Mr. MacVeagh said he wanted to ascertain for the President matters regarding Senator Lorimer's election, and that he (Deneen) jokingly replied:

"Ask the President. He is the man who is said to have sent the message that did it."

Governor Deneen added that in response to further inquiry from the secretary he related the conversation between himself and Hines. "The conversation only lasted 10 or 15 minutes. For the secretary, after I had related my part in the election, he said he was astonished at the reports."

The afternoon session was practically devoted to the Hines-Deneen telephone conversation, in which Deneen had an important bearing on the Lorimer claim that Deneen favored Lorimer's election.

"Do you think Mr. Hines might have mentioned Mr. Reynolds' name for purposes of identification," inquired Senator Fletcher, referring to Hines' testimony.

"No," was the response. "Mr. Reynolds could not have identified Mr. Hines, for I did not know Mr. Reynolds very well."

Governor Deneen declared that it was not necessary for him to assist Hines, because the contest had been won by Lorimer the night before.

When the committee resumes its hearings Monday the testimony will be regarding the activities of Edward Hines in the Lorimer election.

Says Secretary of Treasury Asked About Lorimer Election in 1909.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—President Taft's administration was brought into the Lorimer election in a new way today, when Governor Deneen of Illinois testified that as early as August, 1909, Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh sent for him to "ascertain for the President matters regarding the election of Senator Lorimer." This was about three months after Mr. Lorimer's election.

Whether Secretary MacVeagh was proceeding on his own initiative or the President had actually suggested that he interview Governor Deneen was not revealed. It was not developed whether an extended inquiry was being conducted by the administration into the matter of Senator Lorimer's election. Governor Deneen mentioned the name of Secretary MacVeagh when he was asked to give his version of the famous telephone conversation between Edward Hines and himself on the day Lorimer was elected.

It was in this conversation, Hines says, Deneen promised to support Lorimer. This Governor Deneen denied.

Hines testified he said over the telephone that he was on his way to Springfield to bring Deneen a message from Secretary MacVeagh.

Burglars, Secure $115 at Troy, Kan., but Overlook $300 in Safe They Blow Open.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., July 15.—The postoffice at Troy, Kan., 10 miles across the Missouri river from here, was broken into early today, the safe blown open, and $115 in silver taken. The robbers overlooked a roll of bills amounting to $300 which was in the safe. The robbery was not discovered until postmaster John R. Kennedy opened the office today. Entrance was effected by cutting a padlock off the rear door.

HIWATHA, Kan., July 15.—Daniel W. Wilder, author and pioneer editor of a political leader, died at his home here tonight as a result of injuries sustained today when he walked out of the window of his bedroom. It is supposed he became confused and mistook the window for a door.

Today was Mr. Wilder's seventy-ninth birthday. He came to Kansas in 1857. In August, 1904, he was elected to the Free Press. In 1886 he was one of the editors and owners of the Free Democrat at St. Joseph, Mo. For its abolition opinions, freely expressed, the Free Democrat was confiscated and Wilder fled to Kany to escape arrest.

Mr. Wilder was for many years one of the prominent Republicans of Kansas.

How to Remove a Bad Complexion

(From London Fashions.)

Cosmetics can never really help a poor complexion; often they are positively harmful. The sensible, rational way of attaining a brilliant, natural complexion is to give the skin vigorous and beautiful young skin underneath a chance to show itself and to breathe.

This is best done in a very simple way, by merely applying mercolized wax at night, like cold cream, and washing it off in the morning. Good mercolized wax can be obtained from any well stocked druggist. It absorbs the disfiguring cuticle gradually and harmlessly, leaving a brilliant, natural complexion. Of course, this also takes with it all such facial blemishes as red blotches, tan, moth patches, sallowness, liver spots, pimples, etc. As a freckle remover and general complexion beautifier this old-fashioned remedy is unequalled.

BERLIN, July 15.—A municipal boarding house for working girls is projected by the town council of Rixdorf, one of the boroughs of Greater Berlin.

A lady, who desires to remain anonymous, has offered to subscribe $25,000 towards the cost of erecting the building, on condition that the municipality gives the necessary plot of land and undertakes a supervision of the management. The scheme has been favorably viewed by the town council, which has appointed a committee to work out the details. It is proposed to erect a home where 500 girls can live and obtain their meals at a minimum expense. Only girls who are earning their own living and who have no parents in Greater Berlin will be admitted to the home.

As there is a great demand for respectable houses for girls who are earning their own living, the Association of Female Commercial Employees of Greater Berlin, which has a membership of 30,000, has addressed a letter to the Rixdorf town council, expressing the hope that the proposed boarding house will be built with all possible speed. Although there are many forms of municipal enterprise in Germany, this will be the first municipal hotel.

NAME'S THE A-K-N

PARIS, July 11.—A beginning has been made with the Rue Edouard VII, which is intended to commemorate and immortalize in the capital the popularity of the late king. The street will be a short one beginning close to the door of the Athenes theater, at the Rue Bordreau and ending its brief career at the Boulevard. At present it is staked out with white posts, but the high white houses that will border it are already visible in their white plans. The facade above the boardings and scaffolding. The Rue Edouard VII will run along a short bit of the old Rue de la Republique, the last four houses, in which were pulled down this winter.

England Reclaims More Land From Sea Than It Loses by Erosion

LONDON, July 15.—The fact that the united kingdom is growing in size yearly instead of shrinking is proved in the final report of the royal commission on coast erosion, the reclamation of tidal lands, and afforestation, which has now been printed, and will be in the hands of members of parliament today.

It is estimated that during the last 25 years about 6,440 acres have been lost by coast erosion, while 45,850 acres have been reclaimed from the sea. The losses have been chiefly on the open coast, and the gains almost entirely in the tidal estuaries.

Erosion has been most serious on the east coast of England, and Ireland, and would have been far more serious but for extensive works carried out by local authorities. From a national point of view, the report states, the extent of erosion need not be considered alarming, but in order to deal effectively with the situation remedial measures are necessary.

SUPPLY OFFICERS HAVE FILOCHED MILLIONS.

Trial Reveals That They Had Perfected System of Extortion.

MOSCOW, July 15.—The "trial of the sixty-six," as it is popularly called, reveals an astounding state of corruption in the Moscow supply department of the Russian army. Of the members of the Moscow intendancy, between 1904 and 1910, two generals, 21 colonels and 38 captains, besides four councilors of state, are charged with systematic extortion, dishonesty and false-taking.

The majority of the accused are in uniform and wear various orders and decorations. The sums alleged to have been illicitly obtained by them range downwards from $125,000, which is said to have been the share of one of the members of the receiving committee of the intendancy. It is calculated that one firm alone in the course of 25 years has paid $10,000,000 in bribes to the members of the Moscow supply department.

One of the counts of the indictment is that the department accepted from the contractor boots of such wretched quality that the soldiers could not wear them, and sold them for what they would fetch. The boots eventually found their way back to the contractor who delivered them again to the department.

The soldiers were obliged to sell their food in order to procure boots for themselves. It is declared that clerks in the department deliberately spoiled the samples of any firm which did not give them bribes.

Red Tape Causes Zorse to Travel 20,000 Miles

LONDON, July 15.—A striking instance of red-tapeism in international horse traffic under the British flag has just been experienced by Mr. Thomas Learmouth, a well-known Australian now staying in London.

While traveling in the east he bought the famous Arab stallion Soladin, standing 15.1 hands high, with the object of improving the breed in his native country. As there is an embargo on Arab horses leaving the Ottoman empire, the animal was secretly sent from Damascus to Cairo by camel train, a journey which occupied 23 days.

From Cairo it was conveyed by train to Port Said, where it was shipped to Mr. Learmouth's agents at Melbourne. On arrival at the latter port the authorities refused to allow the animal to land as it was "against the law," and only with difficulty could they be prevailed upon to have it placed in quarantine for five days, and then re-shipped to Port Said by a French liner. From Port Said Mr. Learmouth had the animal brought to London, which it has just reached, after having traveled something like 20,000 miles, at a transportation cost to him of $600.

PARIS, July 15.—In honor of a number of English and French guests, all of whom were Persian dress, a costly entertainment, entitled "The Thousand and Second Night," was given the other night by a Paris business man.

Waited upon by 20 native attendants, the guests reclined on luxurious divans while Mlle. Trouhanova, the wonderful Russian dancer, gave a series of dances to oriental music. A prominent Parisian actress told fortunes, and M. de May, who was attired as Nebuchadnezzar, with a high and gorgeous headdress, recited a fantastic tale in the original Persian.

The entertainment reached its height when shortly before dawn noiseless firework attracted the guests to the gardens surrounding the house, and when they reached the lawn they found a number of strange animals walking about, including two great elephants, several lions, two greyhounds and some marmosets, all suffused in soft-colored lights.

All the costumes were picturesque and very costly. The guests appeared under assumed names, and great care was taken to prevent any of the invitations falling into the hands of unauthorized persons.

The entertainment is said to have cost $35,000.

Foreign Business for Fiscal Year Broke All Records

WASHINGTON, July 15.—All foreign records of the United States were broken during the fiscal year ending June 30. Figures of the bureau of statistics issued today show the vast volume of foreign business mounted into the enormous sum of more than $3,500,000,000 which exceeded the record year of 1907 by more than $268,000,000.

The country's exports for the first time exceeded the two billion dollar mark while the imports were second only to last year's.

The year wound up with a balance of trade of more than $520,000,000 in favor of American business. This is $332,000,000 more than last year's balance, but was exceeded by the record year of 1908 and 1901 and 1900 and 1899. Fifty per cent of the imports entered the country free of duty being greater than at any time in the history of the trade except in 1892-93-94 when sugar was being imported free under the McKinley tariff law. The total value of merchandise entering free, however, was larger than in any year heretofore.

Exact figures of the foreign trade are:

	1911.	1910.
Total exports and imports	$3,578,676,480	$3,301,832,150
Exports	1,527,908,086	1,556,947,430
Imports	2,048,691,392	1,744,884,720
Excess exports over imports	520,706,304	188,037,290
Imports, free of duty	777,988,462	755,311,396
Imports dutiable	749,996,736	801,639,030
Foreign merchandise exported	35,771,474	34,900,722
Domestic merchandise exported	2,012,915,918	1,710,083,998

Unionists Gathering at Denver to Help Miners

DENVER, July 15.—Officers and sympathizers of the United Mine Workers are arriving daily from various parts of the United States to take an active part in the proposed settlement of the strike in the northern coal fields. Besides the two international board members, E. T. Fitzhugh and George Morgan, here have arrived in Denver, Mother Jones, the well-known friend of the labor unions, Duncan McDonald of Springfield, Ill., secretary of the United Mine Workers of District 12 of Illinois, and William Green of Coshocton, O., a member of the Ohio state senate.

President John P. White of the mine workers is expected daily. It has been at White's instance that his lieutenants have answered to Denver to further the interests of the United Mine Workers.

President John McCannan of the State Federation of Labor has been appointed temporary secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers to take the place of William Crawford, who is sent to jail by Judge Greeley Whitford yesterday.

No Pension Legislation During Special Session

WASHINGTON, July 15.—All hope of pension legislation at this session of Congress was dashed today when Democratic Leader Underwood served notice that such legislation would be taken up at the proper time at the regular session in December. Just before the House adjourned today until next Wednesday Representative Kendall of Iowa, insurgent Republican, objected to an adjournment over Monday when, under the rules a pension increase bill could be considered.

Mr. Underwood said the bill which would be brought in by the Democratic majority at the regular session would be different from that favored by the Republicans in that it would not provide pensions for soldiers who had never been within 500 miles of a battle-field.

Wife of Senator Lea Improving as Result of Reaching Colorado

DENVER, July 15.—Revived by Colorado's exhilarating mountain breezes Mrs. Luke Lea, wife of Senator Luke Lea of Tennessee, lies tonight at the family's summer home, 555 Pearl street, her present condition being strongly favorable to ultimate recovery as the culmination of the Lea's ocean to mountain race with approaching death. Late today Senator Lea gave out the following statement:

"Mrs. Lea stood the trip well. The change in climate appears to have been most beneficial and gives encouragement to hope for her ultimate recovery."

So quiet was the arrival of the Leas in Denver at 9 o'clock last night that not even officials of the Union Pacific over whose road the special car traveled from Omaha knew of the successful completion of the 2000-mile race to save Mrs. Lea's life.

In the party besides Mrs. Lea were Mrs. Percy Warner and Mrs. George Frazier, mother and sister respectively. Dr. H. D. Frye, Mrs. Lea's physician and Miss Shackelford, a nurse.

WOMAN DELAYS RESCUERS AND SWIMMER IS DROWNED

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 15.—A momentary delay, occasioned by a woman throwing her arms about one of the volunteer rescuers, is believed to have prevented the saving of James H. Boone of Philadelphia, who was drowned in the surf here this evening. Boone, who was 52 years old, went in bathing after the life guards left the beach. A strong current carried him out, and several persons tried to rescue him. Boone volunteered to go out in a boat, but as they were launching it, a woman threw her arms about one of them and prevented him from getting into it.

A WANT AD IN THE GAZETTE IS WHAT BRINGS RESULTS

INCIVILITY IN STATIONERY

In a recent issue of the Pueblo Star-Journal, an editorial appeared concerning the plan originated by former Mayor D. N. Hester of this city for removing the United States capital to Colorado Springs during the summer months. It is headed "The Nation's Summer Capital—Colorado Springs the Logical Place," and reads as follows:

Nowhere on earth can there be found a city which a kind Providence has surrounded with as many marvelous works of nature, with as many and as varied scenic attractions, with as desirable and as inviting summer climate, and with as good transportation facilities as Pueblo's neighbor, the beautiful city which thrives at the foot of Pikes Peak—Colorado Springs.

This is a strong statement, but it is true, and no person who has had the pleasure of visiting Colorado Springs, and who has had opportunity of comparing its attractions, its environment, and its citizenship with other cities claiming similar distinction, will deny the assertion.

It is the ideal residence city, especially during the summer months. The nation wants a summer capital. Then, why not Colorado Springs?

Broadmoor, nestled in a cove at the foot of Cheyenne mountain, with the Broadmoor Casino Hotel, which appears to have been constructed with the view that some day it might become a public building, and which already has the appearance of a building of state, offers a made-to-order summer capital, surrounded with spacious grounds which it would be hard to duplicate in any quarter of the globe.

Opportunities usually come but once, seldom oftener.

Colorado Springs has an opportunity now to become the nation's summer capital, and it should take advantage of that opportunity without a day's delay.

Colorado Springs or El Paso county could well afford to buy the Broadmoor Casino hotel and the beautiful park in which it is located, and present it to the federal government for the nation's summer capital.

When it comes to describing the works of nature and the scenic environment, pen pictures or type pictures fail. People have to live close to the things nature bestows upon a community to half way appreciate the satisfaction and enjoyment of a life among them, and so it is with the environment at Colorado Springs.

The Star-Journal is making the suggestion of a summer capital to be located at Colorado Springs without prejudice to its own city, Pueblo, for the reason that Pueblo acknowledges the supreme climatic and scenic advantages Colorado Springs possesses during the summer months, and for the reason that Pueblo can afford to exert every energy to have its sister city become the summer capital of the nation.

What will Colorado Springs do?

On every day 20,000 postals of scenes in the Pikes Peak region are distributed free, but on account of the great demand on the week preceding, 2,000 of yesterday's issue were given away in advance.

No cards are given away at the Chamber of Commerce free information bureau on Pikes Peak avenue, but crowds throng the other Tejon street quarters on every card day, receiving as many of the cards as they will promise to mail. The card method of advertising is conceded to be one of the best ever devised by local men. It has been adopted by other towns throughout the country since the first here has proved satisfactory.

"DAILY DOINGS" EXPLOITS COMING SPRINGS CARNIVAL

By devoting whole pages of its illustrated magazine, Daily Springs, to advertising the big carnival to be held here July 11-August 5, the Chamber of Commerce does the town a great service. In this week's issue of the little magazine a full page illustrated article tells of the offerings of carnival week and presents an alluring picture of the plans. Illustrations of the appearance to be put on exhibition at Rockwell park during Wednesday and Thursday of carnival week are included in the article.

COME WITH US
On our picnic excursion to Clyde, Sunday, the 16th. All the Eagles and all the Eagles' families and all the Eagles' friends are going.

General Linus E. Sherman, aged 78 years, and for 35 years a resident of Colorado Springs, lies critically ill at the home of his brother in Ludlow, Vt. As past commander of G. A. R. post No. 22 of this city, and of the Department of Colorado and Wyoming, General Sherman is prominent in G. A. R. circles. Word of his illness was received in this city Wednesday, but at that time it was not considered serious, he not being confined to his bed. However, he sank gradually till late Tuesday express grave doubt of his recovery.

GEN. LINUS E. SHERMAN.

In 1861, General Sherman graduated from Middlebury college, Middlebury, Vt., and one year later he enlisted in the Union army, in a Vermont regiment of volunteers. He fought through the Civil war, and at its close went back to Vermont. In 1876 he came to Colorado Springs, and has remained a resident ever since.

General Sherman expressed a wish to go on to the home of his daughter in Canada, hoping that his son-in-law, Dr. Bates, might be able to treat him successfully. A strenuous trip to the east, to attend the reunion of his old classmates, all of whom are over 70 years of age, was more than he could stand, and his illness resulted. For months he has been in feeble condition, but until recently there was no fear of serious results. General Sherman is accompanied by his wife. He has three daughters, two living in California and one in Canada.

Assistant District Attorney Purcell went to Hugo yesterday, where he filed a direct information in the district court charging R. E. Almond with the murder of the latter's brother-in-law, W. V. Barger, a ranchman of Lincoln county. Barger was shot early Thursday morning at the Almond homestead, 62 miles southeast of Colorado Springs.

Almond was brought to the county jail here the same night. On Friday an inquest was held at Kendrick, Colo., and Almond was held on a verdict which found that Barger died from gunshot wounds inflicted by Almond with felonious intent.

Sheriff G. V. Lewis and Dr. Francis W. Lloyd of Lincoln county took Almond to Hugo yesterday, where the trial will be held.

Barger's death followed a family feud of several weeks standing, in which homestead rights figured in the controversy. The men lived on adjoining properties, and Barger, it is alleged, was shot down when he was going to a well for water. Almond declares that he killed in self-defense.

MUCH BUSINESS BEFORE AMER. WOMAN'S LEAGUE

At a recent meeting of Pikes Peak chapter, American Woman's league, it was voted that a letter of sympathy be sent to Mrs. L. E. Sherman on account of the illness of her husband, Gen. L. E. Sherman.

Reports from the national board of managers were read, announcing improvements in chapter house plans and the immediate calling of a congress, at which the national woman president will be elected. Until that time E. G. Lewis, founder of the organization, who has been acting as president pro tem, will continue in charge.

It was also voted to send a letter of protest against the decision to hang the Canadian woman, Mrs. Angelina Napolitano, who killed her husband. Confidence in Founder E. G. Lewis was voted.

The following program was given at the close of the regular session:

MAN AND WIFE ARRESTED IN A DRUG CASE

Government secret service operatives and the local police department yesterday arrested Thomas B. McCleave and his wife, Dorothy, who are to be charged, it is said, with a violation of the United States internal revenue laws. The woman may also be charged with dealing in the white slave traffic. The arrest was made by Detectives Hallsback and Gavin and Secret Service Agents Love, Price and Smith, at 218 West Cucharas street.

The authorities believe that McCleave and his wife have been dealing in opium and cooking it for smoking purposes. Two smoking layouts, including pipes with silver trimmings and with jewels, together with several pill boxes and needles, were found at the house where the McCleaves were arrested.

The officers said last evening that they also found empty opium cans, as well as Chinese dice, wax and ink. It is alleged that the prisoners cook the opium for smoking and seal the cans in a way to give the impression that the drug has been prepared in China.

McCleave is about 27 years old, and his wife, who, it is said, was an actress at one time, is about 20. She was taken to the county jail and her husband held at police headquarters pending the arrival today of federal officers from Denver.

For the last three seasons McCleave has been in Colorado Springs selling "mechanical dancing men." The figures are usually operated on a black cloth by means of a thread. It is believed, however, that McCleave carried on his "stunt" with the dancing men merely as a blind. According to the authorities, he is wanted in Texas on the grave charge on which he was arrested here. He admits selling the drug, but claims that in doing so he is not violating the law.

PLAN ENTERTAINMENT FOR VISITORS

Two months' consideration by a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the form of entertainment to be accorded the visiting members of the National Realty Dealers association, which meets next week in Denver, when they come here after the completion of the convention, resulted in arrangements to provide autos and other features for the visitors. They will stay three days, and on each day some form of entertainment by the Chamber of Commerce will be given.

Tomorrow afternoon the reception committee, which consists of W. W. Williamson, Miles Cook, A. R. Allen, R. E. Johnson and J. F. Thomas, will meet again, and all plans will be worked out definitely.

NOTES

The "home premises" contest closed yesterday with a better competition than for several years. Much greater interest is manifested than for some time past. Two years ago the baby show drew the largest crowd of any, but this year, although entries for the show are coming in fast, it seems as if the children's "doll day" will beat it by far. The merchants have offered some valuable prizes, both in the doll and baby show, and it is hoped that many will be entered in both.

The Horticultural society room in the county court house every afternoon, is looking for judges of the babies.

The request has been made that all entries be in early. No charges are asked for exhibiting.

All are invited to the next regular meeting of the society, which will be held at the court house, Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.

Introducing Mr. Gardner

Mr. W. W. Gardner is in Colorado Springs to talk about 30 per cent.

Just that. 30 per cent.

He is our representative, and "Belmont Place" is our property and pride, but these are only the necessary incidentals of his conversation.

His main theme is 30 per cent on YOUR money! Not alone the money you already have but equally the money you are to have later in other words, your prospective earnings or savings.

"Belmont Place" can pay you this 30 per cent. It has already paid others 30 per cent. It is doing better than 30 per cent right now.

It is the greatest residence conception in Denver's history—the most successful and uniquely managed enterprise of the kind that the West has ever known.

It is stout as a bank in fact, stouter; it's solid earth.

And it pays 30 per cent.

Mr. Gardner has the evidence the PROOFS. That is why he is in Colorado Springs to show the evidence and the proofs.

He opens offices tomorrow (Monday) morning at 21 N. Tejon street.

Call there.

We ask you to call on our PERSONAL assurance that this advertisement means exactly what it says 30 per cent.

We have been in business in Denver a good many years. We do the largest real estate business in Colorado and the best. We could not afford to SAY 30 per cent if we did not MEAN 30 per cent.

And as we do mean 30 per cent, you cannot afford to miss Mr. Gardner. You cannot afford to miss him no matter where your money may be just now.

Mr. Gardner daily until 8:30 p. m. At 21 N. Tejon street. 30 per cent!

THE PICTURE PLAY

MATINEE GIRL

Anxious Mothers Welcome a Transfer of Interest to the People of the Film.

Have you met the motion picture matinee girl? She is here and here to stay and she is the product as well as the producer of the present exploitation of the personality of the picture players.

It is a harmless fad, and many level-headed mothers welcome the fact that the player on the screen has replaced the player on the stage in her daughter's affections.

It is a much more satisfying fad to the matinee girl herself.

Even if she lives in one of the large cities it is seldom that her particular histrionic hero is in town for more than a few weeks each season. But when she selects Gene Gauntier or Maurice Costello or Florence Lawrence, or any of the others of the long list as the theatrical god, she has her favorites constantly with her. Each week or even more often they are seen in new productions, and now it is even possible for the extremist to procure photographs of the idols.

The motion picture matinee girl is a comparatively recent development of the photoplayhouse. She began to develop when the photoplay was presented in the adequate surroundings, in a clean, well conducted theater to which even the most careful mother was willing to permit her daughter to go unattended.

Then the picture players became something more to the audience than a deposit of developing agent upon a strip of film. At first they were that cunning girl with the "Blank" or the tall handsome man with the "Dash" until, in some fashion, it became known that this "player" was Miss Scandoso or that man Mr. Brown.

At our local picture theater the favorites are known by their names because the beautiful lobby display of photographs tells you the story of each player and is enjoyed by all player goers.

Pikes Peak Region to Be Well Advertised in Big Parade at Denver

In the big industrial parade, to be held in Denver next Tuesday, Colorado Springs and the Pikes Peak region will be well represented. In accordance with the plans of the Chamber of Commerce, a float has been prepared for the Denver parade that should attract much attention along the route of the long march. The float requires the service of the largest wagon in Denver, a theater truck made especially for carrying and transporting long pieces of scenery.

The float contains two long paintings on canvas that picture Pikes Peak and part of the front range, with the entrance to the Garden of the Gods in the foreground. The paintings, which are each 25 feet long by 10 feet high, are the work of William Bancroft, the Colorado Springs artist and designer. They are to be placed back to back on the float, so that both sides may be seen, and the same view presented to both sides of the street. Underneath the paintings, in letters large enough to be read on the moving picture films of the parade, will be placed the words, "Colorado Springs." The films are to be exhibited in hundreds of towns and cities all over the country.

The two paintings, which are now on exhibition in the rear room of the floor in the Independence building, will be taken to Denver tomorrow and set up on the wagons, ready to be sent out for the parade Tuesday morning. The work of the artist has called forth general admiration, and the unanimous approval of all the members of the Chamber of Commerce committee, who had the work in charge. After use in the Denver parade, the pictures will be brought back to this city to be shown in the big civic and pioneer parade, one of the features of the Springs carnival. Later, probably, they will be sent to an eastern town for exhibition in a railroad ticket office or other public place.

From Success. Smitherson went home one evening after a bad day at the gambling table. "Wife," he said, "have you anything to eat?" "Yes, lots of things." "Well, cook up everything in the house everything!" "Gracious! Are you so hungry?" "No," answered Smitherson with finality. "I'm going to sell the stove."

A WOMAN'S APPEAL

To all knowing sufferers of rheumatism, whether in the form of the joints, sciatica, lumbago, backache, pains in the kidneys or neuralgia pains, to write to her for a home treatment which has repeatedly cured all of these troubles. She feels it her duty to send it to all sufferers FREE. You cure yourself at home as thousands will testify—no change of climate being necessary. This simple discovery banishes uric acid from the blood, loosens the stiffened joints, purifies the blood, and brightens the eyes, giving elasticity and tone to the whole system. If the above interests you, for proof address Mrs. M. Summers, Box R, South Bend, Ind.

DID NOT ASK THAT ONLY UNION MEN BE EMPLOYED

It was erroneously announced some time ago that the Federated Trades council had requested the City Council to employ none but union men on the street work. The labor body requested that none but American residents of Colorado Springs and El Paso county be employed on this work; and the Council, while unable to control the method of labor employment by contractors in the proposed street paving, for instance, formally received the communication and expressed its desire to do all in its power to comply with the request.

THACKERAY REPAID THEM

Thackeray's lectures started well in America, says the London Chronicle. Of the first lecture he delivered in the country his friend Field records: "I remember Thackeray's uproarious shouting and dancing when he was told that the tickets to his first course of lectures were all sold, and when we rode together from his hotel, to the friends are going."

OWN YOUR OWN HOME IN MANITOU

When people are on leave are bent on a good time to relax business. But it is only business people who have time for pleasure. Business people look ahead. That's the reason they are business people. This is pre-eminently the summer resort section of the United States. Thousands of people are here now seeking comfort, health and recreation. In view of the terrific season throughout the country the past few weeks there will be many thousands more next season. The question is going to be accommodations. Places to live will be at a premium. We have a few lots in South Manitou that we are going to put on the market beginning tomorrow (Monday, 17th). They are the few remaining pieces of unoccupied property that are really desirable. They are easily accessible and are nearest to the center of things in Manitou. It is only a short stroll to the railway passenger stations, the street and scenic railways, the springs, parks, hotels, amusements, theaters and all other points of interest that go to make Manitou so popular. They are cheaper now than they will ever be as long as Pikes Peak stands and from present indications that will be for some time. You can own one of these lots for less than half the cost of one trip, and you can own a cozy summer home there for less than the cost of two trips.

If you are interested it will be our pleasure to show you this property and tell you all about it. Drop a card to our offices, telephone Cedar 7, or better still, call and see us.

Comparison

We Ask the Public to Our Salesrooms to Look Over the

Five-Year Electric $75

COMPARE this car with all the electric cars in the market attention is called to the fact that other coupe cars sell for $2,500 to $3,000. COMPARE the low hung, stylish body, with a step in and out to the top heavy models, with a climb up and down. COMPARE the pressed steel frame and running gear—identical with the frames of the most exclusive gasoline cars. COMPARE the imported ball bearings which assure easy running and a saving of current and tire wear. COMPARE the aluminum body—it will stand the Colorado sun, and not split or crack. COMPARE the simplicity of the direct drive—no chains, no long shaft—no indirect application of the power to the rear axle. COMPARE the interior finish the broad deep seats—this is a four-passenger car—not a makeshift for an emergency. COMPARE every point you wish, but after careful consideration we know you will agree with us that regardless of price, the HUPP-YEATS is the best electric car in the market today, and that $1,000 saved is a consideration well worth your COMPARISON. Banda Mexicana at Mt. Manitou Park: Wednesday

Announcement is made by the management of Mt. Manitou park, at the end of the Manitou scenic incline railway, that the Banda Mexicana, the well-known concert band, has been engaged to play a series of concerts for one day at the top of the mountain in Manitou park.

The concert will be given next Wednesday morning, afternoon and evening. For the evening concert the road will run special cars from Manitou, opening the scenic incline for the moonlight ride for the first time. A bandstand is being erected on the peak, built large enough to accommodate the 80 men who comprise the musical organization.

The Banda Mexicana has made for itself a reputation equalled by no other traveling band within the short time that it has been on tour in the United States. The organization, which is most spectacular, formerly was the Banda Polaris, the popular band of Mexico City. It was the greatest of Mexican bands.

The entire band, with the dancing girls and singers, will be in Mt. Manitou park. It will arrive Wednesday morning in a special train. Conductor Roach, formerly leader of the United States Marine band, is the conductor. Since its engagement in Denver, at the Auditorium, where it played for one week, the Banda Mexicana has been adding new laurels to its list during its road engagements, and this probably will be the only time it will be heard in the Pikes Peak region, as it is headed for the coast on a tour around the world.

COLD MINT SAUCE

From the Delineator.
Add to two tablespoonsful of washed and finely chopped mint a little white pepper and a gill of vinegar in which two tablespoonsful of sugar have been dissolved. Let stand a half-hour before serving. If this sauce is preferred hot, the vinegar and sugar may be heated to the boiling point and the minced meat stirred in just before serving.

Automobilists in England—they call them motorists over there—are much interested in the success of an invention known as "solid petrol" or "positive in little bricks." Its exact composition is, of course a secret. It contains 90 per cent of ordinary gasoline, a percentage of waxy matter and 1 per cent of a foreign substance, which gives it solidity. A small block of it is said to be equal to a gallon of liquid motive power, and its inventor says that enough to propel a car 1,200 miles can be carried in a little box on the running board of the machine.

WON'T NEED HELP

From the Mariners' Advocate.

SMALL FIRE—The igniting of some rubbish between the buildings occupied by the Belmont restaurant and the cigar store at 126 East Pikes Peak avenue, yesterday at noon, called out the fire department, which extinguished the blaze before it damaged the buildings. Political Prisoners in Moscow

Institution Afraid to Tell of Indignities.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 15.—Starting revelations have come to light as to the cruel treatment of the inmates of a large jail at Moscow, which since the last revolution, has been utilized as a prison for those convicted of political offenses.

The prison is overcrowded. Built to hold 1,500 prisoners, it now contains 1,800. The prisoners are shockingly treated. The regulations provide for meat being served twice a week, but the prisoners have not seen much less tasted, flesh for months. The slightest act of insubordination is punished. It is not uncommon for men to receive from 25 to 50 strokes daily. The prisoners are supposed to get part of the proceeds of their work, but owing to an understanding between the prison officials and the contractors the payment becomes lower and lower, and if a prisoner complains about the scantiness of his pay he is accused of insubordination and punished.

The fear of being punished has a disastrous effect on the reason of the prisoners. In order to escape punishment a 31-year-old prisoner hanged himself the other day.

Balkan Peninsula a Vermiform Appendix That Needs Removing

By FREDERICK WERNER.
BERLIN, July 15.—The Balkan peninsula might well be called the vermiform appendix of Europe, for threatening the peace and well-being of the whole continent, and at times like the present it seems as if a serious surgical operation might have to be resorted to in order to relieve Europe from the danger of congenital disturbance.

The latest news from Albania shows that the situation has now grown worse than ever—a fact which is corroborated as well at Cetina as at Constantinople.

Montenegro demands

ample compensation for the Turkish government for the asylum afforded to the Malleores from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 francs while Turkey is resolved to enter upon no discussion of the subject. The Malleores according to the latest reports, firmly hold all the strategic points, and Montenegro is amply supplying them with the provisions and ammunition. The Malleores trust to European intervention, and expect for their persistence the reward of autonomy.

The Malleores have recently received several quick-firers from a French gun factory. The immediate cause of the persistent opposition of the Malleores is said to be ambiguity of Turkish promises, also the exclusion of the Malleores from the amnesty promised to the Moslem Arnauts, which is bitterly resented by them. The sum of 500,000 promised by the sultan, according to a remark of the Turkish ambassador in Rome to the Marquis di San Giuliano, is not intended for rebuilding the peasants' dwellings, but for the renewal of the blockhouses.

UMPIRE OF DUEL DIES

BERLIN, July 15.—In the course of a duel at Breslau, a student named Bricker, acting as umpire, had his cheek slashed by the rapier of one of the fighters, who also chopped off three of his fingers. The wounded man has now succumbed owing to the suppurating of blood poisoning.

MILDRED BRIDGES GIVEN INTO CUSTODY OF FATHER

CHICAGO, July 15.—An echo of the trial of Evelyn Arthur See of "Absolute Life" notoriety, was heard in the juvenile court today when Stephen Bridges, aged 14, his daughter, Mildred, he taken from Mrs. Bessie Clingen, a probation officer. It was for the abduction of Mildred that See was convicted. Bridges told the court that Mrs. Clingen was an unfit custodian of his daughter having allowed the latter to read "Absolute Life" and to visit See's lawyers during the recent trial. Mrs. Bridges was also in court. Bridges, who desires to regain control of Mildred himself and who is suing for a divorce from his wife, added that the latter was not a fit person to care for his daughter. Mrs. Bridges is a member of the "Absolute Life" cult. Custody of the girl was awarded to Mrs. Bridges until September when the case will be finally decided.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—If Senators

Smoot and Crane, Republicans, and Williams, Democrat, prove true prophets, President Taft will have to solve one of the hardest problems of his administration before the adjournment of the special session of Congress. According to these three senators, all of whom talked with the President today, the Senate, through a combination of Democrats and insurgent Republicans will pass the La Follette bill repealing the wool schedule of the present tariff.

The House already has passed a wool bill which differs materially with that drawn by Senator La Follette but, according to the same unofficial prophets, it would accept the latter measure rather than get no bill at all. President Taft, it is pointed out then would be face to face with one of the most difficult questions that has come before him. He has called the present wool schedule "indefensible." The tariff board has promised to furnish data for a scientific revision of that schedule by December and in many of his later speeches the President has declared that he opposed any revision not based upon the investigation of the board. He has placed himself in opposition to what he has termed "unscientific" and "haphazard" tariff " tinkering," indicating plainly that he would prefer Congress to wait until the tariff board has made its report. The President it was said today has confided to a few people his future course of action if a wool revision bill should be put up to him. It is believed now, however, that he would veto the La Follette bill and in his veto message make a defense of the country for such action.

MAJOR BEECH RAY MUST STAND AN INVESTIGATION

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Investigation will be made of the record of Major Beech R. Ray, of the pay department of the army, says the Army and Navy Register. It is said that in response to a resolution by Congress, of Maryland, calling for information relative to charges of misconduct on the part of officers of the pay department since January 1, 1905, the department returned incomplete records in the case of Major Ray. Allegations are made that he had been the beneficiary of favoritism in the matter of frequent and prolonged leave even when other officers did not get such leave as they were entitled to under the regulations. It is said that an investigation will develop something akin to a sensation.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 15.—No more will the intending Elk be compelled to ride the goat, climb a greased pole or do other "stunts" in connection with his initiation. The last important action of the grand lodge of Elks, which has been in convention here all this week, was to abolish absolutely all horse-play and having in the initiatory rites of the order.

This ends a fight that has been waged for a decade by a constantly growing element in the organization, which contended that the horse-play deterred many men from presenting themselves as members who would be towers of strength to the order.

CATHOLICS IN MEXICO TO KEEP FREE FROM POLITICS

EL PASO, Tex., July 15.—Archbishop Ortiz of Guadalajara, Mex., has issued a letter to the priests of that diocese warning them against taking part in the political activities of the National Catholic party at the approaching elections. The archbishop quotes from the orders of the plenary council of Latin-America, directing priests to refrain from taking part in political disputes and he orders them not to preside in political meetings or to treat of political matters in the pulpit, confessional or in religious associations.

WESTERNERS BASEBALL MAD PASTOR REPORTS

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 15.—The two great impediments to religion in the northwest are the baseball and the money craze," declares Rev. R. W. McCullough, pastor of the leading Baptist church here in a report to his congregation on a western trip. "The westerners are baseball mad. It is baseball every day or the week, Sunday and Monday alike."

RENEW DIVISION AGITATION

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., July 15.—The old agitation for a division of Colorado into two states has been revived with the visit to Fruita, of William A. Pabor, the founder of that town. Pabor in an interview declared that the time was not far distant when there would be an eastern and western Colorado, with Grand Junction the capital of the latter state. Pabor said that the attitude of the eastern slope counties in taking to themselves all the state institutions was sufficient grounds for the movement and also pointed out the recent attempt to divert western slope water to eastern Colorado as a reason why the western slope should have a government of its own.

The subject has already been considerably agitated among commercial clubs on this side of the range, particularly during legislative sessions, when the western slope members found difficulty because of their smaller numbers in getting consideration from the senators and representatives of the big cities on the other side of the range.

ADVERTISE AVIATION.

THE Carnival Committee, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, is leaving no stone unturned to secure the widest possible publicity for the coming celebration and particularly for the aviation meet which will be by far the greatest attraction of the week's program. Arrangements have been made for the extensive distribution of striking posters and news stories are being sent out daily to thousands of papers, especially in the states nearer by from which the larger portion of the attendance is expected to come. The committee, in short, is conducting a systematic and well-counseled advertising campaign from which gratifying results are to be expected. Nevertheless, if the Carnival is to attract to the Pike's Peak Region as many thousands as it ought, active co-operation by every resident is needed.

It is doubtful if even the people of this city and vicinity realize how great an attraction has been secured in the engagement of the bird-men who are to give exhibitions during two days of the Carnival. The aviators to be sent here by the Wright Brothers, Messrs. Parmelee and Turpin, are among the most expert in the country and brilliant and spectacular flights are assured. Moreover, not only will this meet be the first demonstration in this country of making ascents from an altitude of over 6,000 feet, but in the flights a new Wright biplane, expected by the makers to show the greatest speed of any machine they have yet produced, will be employed.

Numerous as have been aeroplane exhibitions in various parts of the country in the last two years, there are hundreds of thousands of people within easy traveling distance of Colorado Springs whose only acquaintance with the art of flying is that acquired from news articles or pictures, and to whom the opportunity to see airships in actual flight would appeal far more strongly than anything else. Many such people will be reached by the advertising that is now being done, but everyone should make it a point during the few days that remain before the opening of the Carnival to write to relatives and friends regarding the aviation meet, welcoming the necessity, if it might ensue, of playing host during the Carnival.

The expense of bringing the bird-men here is heavy, and in order to insure that the venture will be a financial success, every means that may help in drawing tens of thousands of visitors to the city during Carnival week should be utilized.

ARBITRATION ADVANCES.

THE cause of world peace was materially advanced Thursday when a revised Anglo-Japanese treaty, taking the place of the original treaty of alliance adopted on August 12, 1905, was signed at London. The first pact provided, without restrictions, that each nation should aid the other in time of war, the effect of which was to bind Great Britain to take up arms against the United States in the event that this country and Japan should become involved in conflict. The modified treaty, which extends the life of the alliance nearly six years, contains this new clause:

"Should either high contracting party conclude a treaty of arbitration, that negotiation in this agreement shall entail upon such contracting party an obligation not to go to war with the power with whom such treaty of arbitration is in force." The inclusion of this provision was at the instance of Great Britain and came largely as a result of the recent imperial conference at which the Colonial premiers, particularly the Australian representative, opposed the continuance of the alliance with Japan unless such a modification were made.

The adoption of the treaty apparently removes the last obstacle to the early consummation of the proposed general arbitration treaty between this country and Great Britain, the result of which will be to render the probability of war between the two great English speaking nations too remote for consideration. When such a pact becomes effective universal peace will have begun to emerge from the mists of idealism into the clear sunlight of reality, and the attitude of both France and Japan towards similar proposals gives ground for the anticipation that in the near future these nations will enter into like treaties with this country.

However, until Germany falls into line, the danger of another great war, though much lessened, will not be removed. Were the Kaiser's government to follow the public sentiment of the Empire, the Teutons would unquestionably be found in the forefront among the advocates of arbitration, and it is certain that at no distant date the voice of the German people will be strong enough to put an effective check upon the militant ambitions of the "War Lord."

EXIT THE JAPANESE WAR SCARE.

If there is still in this country any otherwise sensible person who has persistently clung to the belief that there is danger of a war with Japan, the speedy acquiescence of the orientals in the proposal to release Great Britain from the obligation to aid them in such an event ought to disabuse him entirely of this foolish notion. But if more evidence of the utter unlikelihood indeed impossibility of Japanese aggression against this country be needed, it is to be found in the condition of the Island's finances.

From $5.12 in 1900, the per capita debt of the Empire has increased to $75.25 and the national debt, already one and one-third billion dollars, is constantly increasing, despite a special sinking fund of $100,000,000 annually, while as an added tribute to the demands of an already almost unbearable burden of militarism a special tariff law has recently become effective which will increase the cost of living among the masses of the Japanese people by fully one-third. Japan, regardless of its national aspirations, is financially incapable of carrying on a war of any magnitude.

Under these circumstances there is nothing left for the ghost of the Japanese war scare to do but lie down and die. Hobson and his brother jingoists can be trusted to find a new specter that will be animated enough to keep them "seein' things at night."

Dispatches from Washington indicate that the Democrats and Insurgents are planning new trouble for President Taft in the form of a coalition to pass the LaFollette wool revision bill. Between the conviction that the present schedule is bad and the desire to defer revision until the tariff board reports, the President has a hard road to travel.

It is said that there is considerable agitation on the Western Slope for a partition of Colorado, with Grand Junction as the capital of a new state. People on the other side of the range should consider that a "Troy" like the average session of a Colorado Legislature would be liable to blight their fruit crops.

Revolution in Venezuela may be looked for now at any moment. Cipriano Castro is said to have entered the country secretly, and the name is a synonym for trouble.

IS THE BREED OF NOBLE BLOOD LOST?

From the Christian Register.
During the last few years we have been celebrating the lives of men and women who were born a hundred years ago with a subtle suggestion, more's the pity, that there are no such men and women living now.

STATE TAXATION OF INCOMES.

From the Chicago Record-Herald.
State laws taxing incomes have proved absolute failures. This fact has been used as an argument for national income taxes. But it appears that the recent discussion of the subject has prompted Wisconsin to try a radical, progressive or graduated income tax law under present conditions. It is hoped, we take it, that public sentiment will enable the authorities to enforce the law with reasonable uniformity and success.

The act provides for a tax of 1 per cent on incomes above $800 in the case of unmarried persons and above $1,200 in the case of married persons. The rate increases with each additional $1,000 of income only one-half of 1 per cent, but incomes above $12,000 are to pay 5 per cent. Federal officials, state legislators and executives, and pensioners are exempt as to their salaries.

Usually those who favor federal income taxation oppose such taxation by the states, although some learned economists suggest a sort of partnership by state and nation for the purpose of levying and sharing a fair, equitable income tax. It remains to be seen how Wisconsin, one of our bold sociological experiment stations, will enforce her noteworthy measure and what lessons she will teach her sister states.

THE PRACTICABLE THING TO DO.

From the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin.
It does not look as though the report of Commissioner Knox prepared ground for any prosecution of the steel corporation as a "combination in the form of trust or otherwise" in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations, or a monopoly or attempted monopoly of the iron and steel part of such trade or commerce. It is made doubtful whether such a prosecution could be maintained under the antitrust law as now more clearly interpreted and applied. The futile investigation which a special committee of the House of Representatives is conducting is not likely to strengthen the ground for this kind of attack. The question which really seems to be raised is whether anything can be done about the degree of control established over the ore supply and the means of bringing it from the mines to the mills. Even that appears to be dimming and is a thing which cannot be done by a monopoly. There are too many available sources of iron ore and means of obtaining it to make any large control of the supply lasting. The most practicable thing to be done to lessen the power for this kind of control is to remove all barriers to competition in furnishing the supply "from whatever source derived." There is no greater absurdity in our tariff than the duties on iron ore and coal.

A COURT FOR WRONGED WIVES.

From Human Life.
"Desertion and non-support of family is a growing evil which cannot be checked too soon. More efficient laws regulating the punishment of both offenses are a necessity. It is imperative that desertion should be made a misdemeanor, and not a felony in order that it may be dealt with in domestic relations courts. Buffalo, New York, and Chicago now have domestic relations courts in which a woman with a troublesome husband may appear at any time and secure the aid of the law without experiencing the degradation of appearance in a criminal court. More of these courts are also needed and it is evident that they should have jurisdiction over all cases of non-support and desertion. Such power vested in them would, it is believed, decrease the desertions among the poor to a remarkable extent. Investigations have shown that from 8 to 43 per cent of the families needing charitable relief in the largest cities are brought to their condition either by the desertion of fathers or their failure to support."

MORALS AND RELIGION STILL STAND.

From the Springfield Republican.
Rev. Luther Freeman has registered from the presidency of Morningglade college at Sioux City, Ia., one of the numerous sectarian colleges scattered through the middle west, because of a difference with the trustees over views on the inspiration of the Bible expressed in a sermon delivered in Kansas City, Mo., April 10. He then said that he had never listened upon holding that the Bible from the beginning to end was verbally inspired by God. Morningglade college is a Methodist Episcopal school, and his utterances in the sermon and in a subsequent newspaper interview were not acceptable to the trustees. There was another complication, namely, a resolution expressing repudiation of Mr. Freeman's views, which was passed by the ministers of the Methodist churches of Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kan. Mr. Freeman's attitude toward the Bible seems unexceptionally reverent; only he will not overlook the results of scholarship. The Methodists have a right to teach what doctrines they please in their colleges just as they have a right to select what subjects they please for inclusion in the curriculum, but it is doubtful whether the cause of education is to be helped by suppression and compromise. In a book recently written by a professor of philosophy in another middle western Methodist college, the idea is expressed that while the results of the higher criticism cannot be overlooked by the preacher, he will do well to abstain from mention of the phrase in the pulpit. It is high time for every preacher to take in the fact that the higher criticism invalidates neither morals nor the Christian religion.

There," said the little lady who is always doing original things, as she rolled up the darned stocking with the whole one in the immemorial fashion of all housewives, and tossed it into the mended pile. "There, now, I can cross that off my list."

"What list?" I inquired.
"Oh, didn't you ever see my list," she laughed. "Well, almost every morning I make out a little list of the things I have to do and then as I get them done I check them off, and you don't know how it helps."

"Here," she brought out a folded paper from under the clock. "Here's my list for today. Of course, I don't put down the routine things like dishes and beds."

The list read:
Darn the stockings.
Make a batch of cookies.
Mend Fred's trousers.
Put Jeanette's coat in the chest.
Clean the silver.
Brush up the living room and dining room.
Four of the seven items were checked off.

"Everyone laughs at me," defended the lady who is always doing original things, evidently suspicious of a twinkle in my eye. "And say they should think I'd rather have time to do the things instead of writhing them down, but truly it helps a lot. In the first place, it keeps me from forgetting the most important thing I have to do the way I used to."

"And in the second place, it takes the load of remembering off my mind. Really, I used to be always thinking in the back of my head. Now, when I was going to do next? Now I simply attend to what I'm doing, and then when I get it done I look at my list."

"And then I get such a satisfaction out of checking things off when they're done. It's like the way my mother used to do when I was going to have some pleasure that it seemed to me I couldn't wait for. She'd cut me out a string of paper dots, one for each day before the day, and I would tear one off each night and it helped so much."

If there really was a twinkle in my eye I think it had vanished before the end of the lady's plea for her quaint little custom.

Some eat person said something to the effect that the wise folks in this world are the folks who refuse to grow up, who play at life as if it were a game and die still happy children.

Don't you think he would have loved the lady who is always doing original things, and her quaint little list?

The wolf came sniffling at my door.
But the wolf had provided on my track before.
And his sniff, sniff, sniff at my lodge door-will.
Only made me laugh at his devilish will.

I stirred my fire and read my book.
And joyed by soul at my lugenook.
His sniff and his snarl were always there.
But my heart was not the heart of a hare.

I cursed the beast and drove him away.
But he came with the fall of night each day.
And his sniff, sniff, sniff, the whole night through.
I could hear between the wind what he blew.

And the time came when I laughed no more.
But glanced with fear at my trail lodge door.
For now I knew that the wolf at bay.
Sooner or later would have his way.

The Fates were three, and I was one.
About my life a net was spun.
My soul grew faint in the deadly snare
And the abred wolf knew my heart's despair.

A crash, and my door flew open wide.
My strength was not as the beast's at my side.
That night on my hearthstone cold and bare.
He licked his paw and made his lair.

DRESS BELAYS WOMEN'S MORALS

If girls want to impress their critical neighbors with the high moral standard it is necessary that the half be worn in the nearest of fashions and that frocks be chosen that are beyond reproach. This is the advice of a dress expert, Miss Neale S. Knowles, of the Iowa State Agricultural college, who studies the scientific side of clothes. She announced the other day to teachers in convention in St. Louis that slovenly clothes mean slovenly mental habits.

Just how far the garments a woman wears may be considered an expression of an inner grace or the opposite, is a subject which classes in home economics have not considered generally, but Miss Grace Hitchings, instructor in the fine arts department of Teachers' college, has gone over the matter seriously and said Miss Knowles is about right.

"If self-respect means morals, then clothes and a normal mind are related," she said. "Every woman who has given the matter a moment's thought understands the effect that garments have on her mind. If she is badly and carelessly dressed she has not the same self-respect she has when daintily clothed. A pair of shoes with run down heels are enough to prevent one's moral viewpoint. Slovenly footwear usually expresses a slovenly mental condition, and a slovenly mental condition may tend to immorality. It would be more difficult to maintain a high standard of morality when thus clad than when arrayed in exquisite tastefulness from head to foot."

"I don't think there is anything so common as to say something about being able to tell the character of a woman from the clothes she has worn during certain years of her life? I think it is from the age of eighteen to forty. The man who said that reached this conclusion by deduction. He knew the mental characteristics of the woman would necessarily find expression in her dresses. He may have been cleverer than most at reading the characteristics, but he knew how to go about it."

"But," asked the interviewer, "how are we to reconcile the generally accepted statement that the morals of the French women are somewhat looser than those of other nationalities when women in the world? They are famous for their coquetry and their daintiness of grooming."

"So they are," Miss Hitchings agreed; "but they are quite as clever at covering up their careless morals as they are in hiding physical imperfections. The French woman cannot be judged by the ordinary standard."

"In our own classes in dressmaking and designing we notice that the girls who have begun to pay more attention to the details of their clothes and to strive for artistic lines and effects are beginning to change their point of view about other things. The influence of dress on the mind is really remarkable when you begin to study cause and effect. Good grooming and grooming make for self-respect, and the encouragement that we give these students to let their individuality find expression in dress, both in costumes and military, broadens their minds. I believe, raises their standard of morals not a little."

"It may be too severe to say that carelessness means immorality, but it certainly means immorality," said Miss Hitchings was dressed in a dark blue tailor costume, slightly hooded, a black satin and velvet round hat and black furs. As if in explanation of her following a fashion eccentricity she said that she considered it right for women to take the best of

NO. 7—RUSSELL SAGE

Take Jay Gould, Russell Sage was born of New York state farmer folk in 1816, in an environment of poverty. As a boy, it is to be noted, he had a dominant yearning for money, and early developed a remarkable capacity for sharp trading. His earliest regular employment was as clerk in the grocery store of a brother at Troy, and being of an especially economical mind, he had soon laid aside sufficient money to open up a store of his own, and when he reached the age of 23 he became a partner in a wholesale grocery establishment.

Russell Sage, at this time, recognized the importance of entering into politics to carry out the schemes he had planned. His grocery business had developed so rapidly that a considerable shipping trade was established, and his firm employed their own vessels and soon gained control of the Troy and Albany markets in the shipment of Vermont and Canadian horses.

His first venture in politics was when he was elected an alderman of Troy, in 1841, and by subsequent elections served for seven years in that capacity. In this position, he was able to secure concessions for several of his pet schemes, which gave him an invaluable advantage for the future work he was to accomplish. He served in Congress from 1853 to 1857.

It was more by accident than design that Mr. Sage entered on his career as a railroad builder and owner. He founded the Commercial bank of Troy and in the course of business loaned $25,000 to the Lacrosse Railroad company. The road soon became financially embarrassed, and the young man saw his money fading away in a threatened bankruptcy. He made an investigation and decided that the property was a good one. He advanced more money and yet more, and finally came into a large interest in what is now the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad. He became a firm believer in the future of railroads, and at the time of his death was interested in more than 24,000 miles of track in all parts of the United States.

The subsequent career of the 44-month clerk is a part of the commercial and financial history of the country. Within a period of 10 years he rose to a commanding position in the affairs of statehood and politics. "He was a man who began life with nothing and ended it with an income of $15 a minute. It was the way a brilliant writer described Russell Sage at the time of his death in 1906.

Mr. Sage, even when a very wealthy man, lived a frugal life, and is said never to have spent over $10,000 a year for his own personal comfort. He once said that very few men had achieved marked success in life such as he had. He was the only one of his name who had done so, and his great success was his glory.

When Russell Sage died in New York on July 23, 1906, he possessed a fortune that was estimated at upwards of $75,000,000. More than 40 railroads helped to build up this fortune, and he was the last survivor of the original directors of the New York Central.

The real Russell Sage was always more or less of an enigma. Balzac alone could have depicted the man who for years carried his lunch from home to the office to save buying it, and for a long time after discontinuing this, rarely if ever, missed the "free lunch" set out by the Western Union company for the benefit of its directors, yet at the same time he sent hundreds of poor New York children on free trains to picnics on his property. The man who with an income of $15 a minute, watched for "bargain" day to make purchases in big department stores, was seldom known to donate money to a large interest in what is now the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad. He became a man who was as much a riddle as the wall.

IN ROSE TIME

It is the joy of the rose,
That it blows,
And goes.

Winter lasts a five months,
Springtime stays but one,
Yellow blow the rye fields,
When the roses in bloom,
Pines are clad at Yuletide,
When the birch is bare,
And the holly is here,
In the frosty air.

Sorrow keeps a stone house
Builted grim and gray,
Pleasure bath a straw thatch
Hung with lanterns gay,
On her petty sorrow,
Niggard rudeness thrives,
Passion ere the groomset,
Bleeds a thousand lives.

Virtue bath a warm heart—
Folly's dead and drowned,
Friendship hath her own when
Love is undisturbed,
Ah! for me the madman
Of the spendthrift flower,
Burning myriad sunsets
In a single hour.

For this is the joy of the rose:
That it blows,
And goes.

CARNIVAL week in Colorado Springs will be devoted largely to pleasure as all will be eager to show the many guests every country. Among the many notables expected are Governor John P. Shafroth; Chief Justice John Campbell, Judge Joseph C. Helm and other equally prominent Colorado citizens both men and women.

Arrangements for the reception which is to be from 8 to 10:30 o'clock in the county court house are being generally looked after by the president, Mrs. William Wells Price and other members of the civic and pioneer parade committee. Mrs. Eugene E. Griswold has been appointed chairman of the special committee of arrangements. Mr. F. L. Rouse will be master of ceremonies assisted by a number of pioneers.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Penrose of Pelham Place have issued invitations for a dance to be given on the evening of Saturday, July 22. There will be but about 50 guests and the dance will be one of the most exclusive and fashionable functions of the season.

Miss Gladys McMillan, daughter of Mrs. Penrose, who landed a few days ago in New York, is expected to give week and her presence at the dance will give it a special touch. Miss McMillan spent last winter in Paris with friends and crossed to London in the spring and was the guest of her aunt, Lady Harrington, during the coronation festivities.

Mr. and Mrs. Young Honor Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bowyer Young were the guests of honor Friday evening at a dinner party of 100 given by Mrs. Young at her home. The dinner was a most elaborate and was profusely used as a floral decoration.

They left Colorado Springs January 15 and sailed a week later for Europe on the "Coronia." While absent, Dr. Moses has taken a special course in medicine in Vienna, and a special course of lectures on the diseases of children in London. Incidentally, last month, Dr. Moses and family witnessed the coronation festivities.

Mention has been made lately of an appointment tendered to Dr. Moses in the government service and by some this is not understood. His appointment is that of surgeon in the medical reserve corps with the rank of first lieutenant, but he does not enter active service, but is simply among the held in reserve in case the United States is at enmity with any formidable foe and requires his assistance. He has already served as assistant surgeon in the Spanish war and has been service in Cuba and the Philippines.

From Canon and Crag

Wood-smoke at twilight-time, and the canon deep in purple and lavender and pale blue shadow-lights, wood-smoke, blue and pungent, floating in graceful clouds up into the pines and disappearing finally afar into the primrose lights of evening skies. Birds, softly twittering their even-songs, flit through the gloaming shadows seeking seclusion for the night in woodland silences. Evening winds, soft and fragrant, blow the camp-fire embers into flaming glow, and resinous pine logs crackle and flare fitfully in the dusk. The stream, gliding quietly over the rocks, sings a lullaby to the drowsing wild flowers. The camp-fire glows vividly as the shadows deepen, and through all the silent forest ways, wood-smoke, blue and misty and evanescent, fades away into the twilight.

SCALP TONIC FOR HOT DAYS.

A cooling, invigorating tonic for the scalp can be prepared at trifling cost by adding one-half pint water to some amount alcohol, then stirring in an ounce of beta-carotol. Massage a little thoroughly into the scalp a few times a week, and you will be astonished on how cool and comfortable it leaves the scalp. This tonic is ideal for correcting scalp difficulties and making the hair silky and fluffy. Its continued use entirely overcomes dandruff or excess oil and induces a heavy growth of beautiful hair.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

Mrs. Jim: Powder will cover up, but not correct complexion faults. By using a massage cream you can rid the skin of pimples, blackheads, blotches, or other impurities, and when this is done it will grow smooth and velvet and take on the healthy tint of youth. A really excellent massage cream can be made with little labor or expense by dissolving two ounces cerol into three-fourths of a pint boiling water and stirring until thick and creamy. This makes a massage cream, the use of which is a positive delight and benefit to the skin.

Mrs. Rose: The fuzz can be removed from your chin without the pain or expense attending the use of the electric needle. Get an original package of this make-up cream, and mix enough with water to cover the hairy surface. Let remain two or three minutes, then scrape off and the hairs come with it. Do not use a little expensive, but it is unailing, it is safe to use. However, it can be used of getting dirt and not some worthless imitation.

Submitted: Your complexion is due to a starved or stunted condition of the underlying tissue, and as a consequence of this no amount of skin care or cosmetic results cannot be obtained. A simple but effective tonic, known as galloi, is frequently prescribed for underdevelopment, and as it is the best thing for the purpose of which I know, I give the formula here: Make a syrup with one-and-a-half cupsful sugar and a pint of water; into this stir an ounce of galloi; the dose is a tablespoonful

ABOUT BEN ADHEM

About Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace;
And saw within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold.
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said:
"What writest thou?" The vision raised its head, and with a look made of all sweet accord, Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."
"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still; and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one who loves his fellow men."
The angel wrote, and vanished. The next night
It came again with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed—
And lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest.

PRESENTATION OF THE
NEW YORK SP-15

THEY'RE ALL OUT FOR THE 1911 PENNANT

WHAT POSITION PRODUCES
BEST BASEBALL MANAGERS?

By W. J. NAUGHTON.

What will they say in England? The noble art of self-defense, the time-honored British game, which used to be summarized in the terse instructions, "hit, stop and get away," the artistic and scientific system of fist play developed and perfected by Broughton, Gentleman, Jackson, Jim Mac, and goodman knows who besides, has been found wanting.

It has been superseded by an entirely different and a seemingly more effective method of fighting. The traditions of the British prize ring, which it was thought would endure for all ages like the lion and the unicorn and the other things which go to make up the British coat of arms, have been swept aside. The old English warhorse, "Keep your eyes open and hit straight from the shoulder," is heard no more in the land. The new gladiatorial that the American, is "close your eyes, if you want to, but don't hit from the shoulder."

There is not a champion reigning who has not done his share toward showing that in pugilism the old way is not the best. Just look them over if you don't believe me.

Jack Johnson beat the majority of his opponents so easily that he did not have to follow any particular method of fighting, but when he found himself alone in the ring with the shaggy monster, Jeffries, he felt that he had to trot his best tricks.

And how did Johnson tame Jeffries? By dodging into Jeff's breastworks, by eluding to left in the same mysterious way, and at the same time sending in apparatus which made Jeff's head roll and which placed dents in Jeff's countenance. There was no "hit, stop and get away" about that, "no straight from the shoulder."

The trouble all seemed to come from the direction of the floor. Sam Langford, whom I suppose no one is better entitled to be called "heavyweight" champion, is another who gives a lie to the laws of pugilism laid down by the late lamented Mr. Mac. Sam's most deadly punches are those he inflicts while plunging against his man. Billy Papke, the best of the middleweights at present, presumably, is another close worker and employer of lifting punches who has helped to show that the old style of fighting is obsolete.

And last, but not least, we have Ad

Wolgaast, whose one object is to have his arms partly entwined with his antagonist's. Something to cling to, Ad wants, and when he twists himself into a position to suit himself, he serves out the breast-grazing uppercuts and loop-the-loops, which seem to bring him better returns than double the number of standing punches.

It is a revelation, beyond doubt, and it's enough to make old Jim Mac turn over in his grave. But this much can be said in defense of the old system. The straight punches, the counters and the ringcraft generally of the old-school were pretty to look at, whereas a latter-day championship contest resembles a dog fight. As things are now, it looks as though boxing instructors will have to take in their shingles and turn their heads to something else. The lives of the existing champions remind us that there is no such thing as a universal system of boxing. Individuality of style is what gathers the large end of the business. It seems to be a case of every man for his own monitor and inventor.

Talking of Wolgaast, he is the most original of all the natural fighters at present ruling the roost. He is an invincible pure and simple, and if the old system of clean breaks had continued, he would not have been heard of. It is when squirming around in the other man's arms that Wolgaast does all the damage.

One of his greatest assets is his vim. As weight making does not enter into his calculations while training, he is enabled to toe the scratch with his strength intact and, being free from the feverishness and irritation which goes with reducing flesh, he is coolness personified while in the ring. Apart from that, he seems to have the ideal fighting temperament.

If I may judge of these matters, Wolgaast is never a prey to excitement, and that means much to him. I have known thoroughly game boxers who lost more stamina through the excitement of boxing than through their exertions or the punishment they received; but master Ad is not built that way. The work in hand does not get on his nerves. If he were less intelligent, I would describe him as a solid, but it's not that. He just loves the game and his enjoyment of the mill in all its phases keeps him in such good humor that worry and he are strangers.

How does Wolgaast compare with Battling Nelson, is a question frequently asked. He is of an entirely different stamp. Nelson's face was his fortune. He usually stood battering until the other man tired and then beat him down.

Wolgaast does not present himself to an opponent's fire any more than he can help. He has a way of covering from attack that is effective, and he remains covered just long enough to start the other man fighting and then he loosens up like a whirlwind.

The five men who are leading the main pennant contenders of 1911. Above are Frank Chance, manager of the Chicago Cubs (on the left) and Johnny McGraw, who guides the destinies of the New York Giants. Below, from left to right, are Red Doolin, fighting skipper of the Phillies; Hughie Jennings, the prancing boss of the Detroit jungle band; and Connie Mack, quiet but shrewd chief of the world's champion Athletics.

Chance, Doolin and McGraw are having a battle royal for the National league banner, while Jennings and Mack, whose real name is Cornelius McGillicuddy, are fighting a duel to the death in the American.

Of this premier quintet, Mack was a third baseman. Chance is a first baseman and Jennings was a shortstop. All five excelled in their particular stations when in their prime.

WORK AND PLAY FOR THE IDLE HOUR

Borders and Designs for Various Purposes DRAWN BY ELEANOR NORRIS

The woman who is fond of embroidering will appreciate the designs given on this page, for they will answer a variety of purposes. Scarf ends for the sideboard or dresser, towel borders, pillow cases, and runners may all be finished with an edge selected from the several designs which Miss Norris has drawn, any one of which will be found exceedingly pretty when finished. The scallops should be slightly padded and worked in buttonhole stitch, the other portions of the designs may be executed either in outline or satin stitch.

THE COSTUME OF A BILIF

Among the many odd peoples of the Philippines are the Bogobos, who inhabit the eastern foothills of Mount Opo, on the Island of Mindanao. The women have rather attractive features, and, including their elaborately adorned costumes, are perhaps the most picturesque natives in the Philippines.

The ornamentation of bead work extends that of any other wild tribe, and involves the labor of many months and even years in completing one full costume. These garments consist of a short coat with tight sleeves and a skirt made like a large sack open at both ends, which is folded about the waist. The cloth is woven on native looms and made of hemp fiber, and will last a lifetime. One suit is valued as high as 100 pesos. The women also wear heavy brass rings as bracelets and anklets. The lobes of their ears are distorted by the insertion of large disks of wood, bamboo, brass or ivory. Often a heavy necklace of beadwork is suspended from the ears, covering the bosom like a piece of bead embroidery.

A bag something like a knapsack, with shoulder straps, called a "cabli," is worn by the men and women. These bags are indispensable, and serve to be part of their wearing apparel and are used to contain betel nut boxes and other belongings.

They are made of the best hemp cloth and are elaborate affairs of beautiful beadwork and fringed with clusters of tiny bells. The scarboards and belts for their poles are also decorated with beadwork and small bells. In fact, they play a prominent part in their ornamentation, and the merry tinkling is rather pretty. Toothbrushes made of horse hair four inches long are worn as a pendant on the chest.

FASHION NOTES

Felt handbags of smart appearance and perfect workmanship are of suede, in colors to match any walking suit, made over a gun metal frame and equipped with a silk cord handle. The same design comes in English morocco, Levant leather, beaver skin and buckram calf, while in mission pattern are some attractive looking receptacles of verde glass and dull brown calf, ornamented with hand toolings and embossings.

Brown, which is to be the color vogue of the coming year, appears in bags of allied antelope, in suede equipped with gold military cord handles, in brown leather with strap handles, in giraffe calf mottled in self tones on an Etruscan metal frame embedded with amber, and in snake skin over an oxidized German silver frame faceted with topaz. These bags are lined with mink or anemist colored suede, have capacious outer pockets containing a beveled mirror, comb, memorandum book and ivory tipped pencil, and their handles are attached to a silver bracelet which may be slipped over the wrist.

A similar equipment in addition to a small purse, card case and the usual vanity outfit is in the new automobile bags, which come in all the popular pelts, have metal frames with semi-circular tops which form a perfect circle when opened, and are equipped with key locks. The new roller skating bag, which answers quite as well for motoring or carriage service, resembles a horse nose poke, in size as well as in shape. It is frequently developed in tanned sheep skin, has kid piped seams and a delicately tinted satin lining.

ENGLISH PARASOLS

English parasols are perhaps the most attractive in the world. The fashionable life of the country renders this particular accessory of dress a necessity, inspiring the makers to their best work. Smart coaching parasols in colored taffetas, with broad, heavy selvedges, are in most general use. For dinner wear, elaborately trimmed sunshades with rows of perky bows or graceful fringe for decorations. Tally lace parasols are particularly smart, paired with a white suit, in her latest stage appearance. The parasol is white taffeta, a small frame, finished with a six-inch fringe or lace fringe. The handle of natural wood, finished with a big ivory heart, into which the ribs are caught in little plaits.

MISS NORRIS' ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Cross Stitch Design.

E. R. M.—Am sorry, but it would be impossible to design another pattern in cross stitch immediately, as quite a number of cross stitch designs have already been drawn.

Any cross stitch pattern could very easily be carried out in beads and a butterfly and basket of flowers will be given, either of which would be effective as a bag decoration.

Am so glad that the patients have proven so useful and hope you will find something just as pleasing among the cross stitch designs.

A Stringer.

A. D.—A very handsome stringer may be made of gray crash, the required length, with hemstitched ends.

Around the entire stringer a geometrical pattern, which should be outlined in blue and yellow, would be very attractive.

A scarf of this sort would be quickly made and is especially nice for a dining-room, where the predominant note is blue.

Various Answers.

L. W. D.—The fuchsia design may be carried out in French knots. The stems should also be made of French knots, as to be effective, the entire design should be carried out in the same manner.

Chain stitch would not be at all pretty on this waist, as a more conventional design is required. You did not state whether the embroidery you wish to use on a little girl's dress was edging or an all-over embroidery, but would suggest if it is an edging to make in empire style, with the skirt of embroidery and a little short-waisted surplus blouse and sleeves in peasant style.

This little waist is in two pieces, with the edging stitched over a V of plain material.

A ribbon sash with a rosette and loops of the ribbon is worn with this little dress.

An all-over embroidery may be made into 1½-inch bands, which serve as a trimming for a little two-piece dress.

A plaited or gathered skirt, trimmed with a band of the embroidery and over this is a tunic in peasant style.

The tunic is cut long enough to form an overskirt effect and is made plain with a square Dutch neck and the embroidery band is applied at the bottom of the tunic and sleeves and outlines the Dutch neck.

The belt of the embroidery is held in place by straps at the waist line.

Ribbon Tie.

Letty.—A dainty tie of ribbon, which has a very Frenchy look, may be made of 2-inch blue ribbon, scalloped in pink floss and having tiny pink flowers embroidered over it, or a small spray at each end.

The ribbon is tied and pinned at the base of a stock collar or worn with turn-overs.

To Embroider Waists.

Troubled Glencoe.—A buttonhole edge would be the best finish for the Dutch neck, and the back should not be too low, just cut a little below the collar line.

French knots may be used on the fuchsia design, but seedling stitch is better and you will find it explained in answer to E. R.

The stems of the morning glory waist may either be outlined or satin stitch. If you work the waist in Kensington stitch, outline the stems, but if you use solid or a combination of Kensington and solid, embroider the stems in satin stitch. Satin stitch is always made by carrying the stitch from side to side across the space to be embroidered.

The leaves are too large for satin stitch and should be embroidered in Kensington or long and short stitch, but the different parts of the flowers may be worked in solid or satin stitch.

The finish of the neck of a Dutch waist is always a matter of personal taste, but think a little edging of lace or insertion would be very pretty.

Lay your pattern on the goods so that the sleeves are placed in exactly the same manner, and the best method of covering the seam is by means of hand-embroidery applied to the bottom of the sleeves.

This not only covers the seam, but is a very correct finish.

Am sorry that your letter could not be published in time to be of more assistance to you.

A personal answer is given if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is inclosed.

A Comb and Brush Tray.

Marian.—A comb and brush tray may be made of the same material as the dressing table scarf and embroidered with the same motif.

This piece of linen is usually 12½ inches and is mounted over stiff cardboard and framed in wood matching the dressing table.

Brass handles are screwed to each end and any picture frame maker can readily do the framing and provide the handles.

Butterfly Design.

Miss J. McL.—A butterfly in cross stitch design will be published and that could easily be applied to a pocketbook, and as cross stitch is now so popular, would make it very much up-to-date.

Am glad that you were so much pleased with the hat design.

Finish for Pinewhish.

Reader.—A suitable finish for an oblong or square pinewhish used in a man's room is obtained with a narrow cord.

This is sewed on straight in the same manner as when applied to a pillow.

A knot is made at each corner and sewed flat and when the cord is applied the effect is very neat.

Seed Stitch.

E. B.—Seedling consists of short, even, back stitches taken at regular intervals, succeeding lines having the stitches midway between the stitches of preceding lines.

This stitch is used to fill in small spaces and is very much used in the French embroidery, and is particularly effective when used on sheer, fine material.

Talks on embroidery stitches was given February 6, 1911, and an illustration of the various stitches was also given.

Scarf for Girl's Woe.

Mrs. M.—Choose a motif for the dressing table scarf, that could easily be carried out in an entire set, including a pillow, stand cover, curtains, bedspread, etc.

When curtains are very much decorated, the walls should be plain, but if the walls have a flowered paper, plain curtains are always best.

Any flower motif is always a good selection, when planning scarfs for a girl's room, but if her favorite flower is selected, it lends an individuality that is very pleasing.

Evening Head-Dresses.

Quite in the style of ancient days, nearly all the evening dresses are completed by important looking head-dresses, with tall aigrettes and ornaments, and folds and twists of various thin materials, or else of velvet; some are almost like little touques or turbans, very few people have their coiffures undisturbed. And it also seems as if the straight fringe over the forehead were to come in again; at least to a moderate extent.

ness of the big shapes, and one seen cream, white, or maize ribbons, and especially striped black and white bows on some of the smartest shapes.

THE LINEN COAT AND SKIRT

The Parisienne is going to be perfectly happy this Summer in a little toilette of fine linen flax-crispe, khaki, green or violet. The perfectly-cut coat is of plain linen, and is ornamented with raised cotton or soft woolen embroidery, or quilting. The skirt is short and of stripes, one of which must match the color of the coat, the other may be of white or mauve, or green, or blue, or white you wish. The combination and ideas are very fetching, very comfortable, and the work is simple. The embroidery on the coat should match the alternating colored stripes.

FANCY BITS AND NOVEL ENDS

Latest among Summer fancy goods are novel scarfs with bags to match. One is of very fine cotton voile in a creamy white, with a narrow border of Egyptian embroidery done in striking colors. An effect equally as good is obtained with a pure white fabric and embroideries of silk and beads in delicate tones of blue and green.

Chinapin chains, a novelty just over from London, are made of large, polished wood-beads in black and costume colors, strung on knotted silk or fastened with metal links. They come in the form of longneck chains, purse chains, and graduated necklaces, and retail at from 24 to 44 cents.

A unique type of workbag, which is equally good in embroidered crash, heavy linen, denim, silk, satin or moire, is shaped like an oblong pocketbook of about ten by five inches diameter. Its capacity is further increased by the plaits as its gusseted ends, its edges are ribbon bound and its satin lined inner side is fitted with cases for thimble, scissors, reels and needlebook.

Colored ribbon finishes the seams of a bag shaped precisely like an old-fashioned carpet satchel having double handles, which, when joined hold the two sagging sides together. This bag is usually developed in art denim or printed cretonne, but is attractively quaint in plain or figured tapestry, edged with tarnished gold beads.

Natural colored crash is made up into a bag which answers for a variety of purposes, since its drawstring top when opened discloses two pockets, one hanging somewhat below the other. In addition there are outside pockets lined with oil silk and sufficiently large to accommodate a pair of footloids or a few small pieces of solid linen. These receptacles are cleverly embroidered or decorated with an applied design in linen of a contrasting shade.

Dainty bags for holding knitting of the sort that an elderly gentlewoman likes to have about her drawing room, and which a girl can easily make, are of nation shape. The foundation is of buckram or very stiff canvas, the lining of a pale hued silk and the outside of black, mauve or silver gray satin in mottos, embroidered in white.

Though designed for stenciling, this pattern may also be worked in outline stitch with good effect, and will prove both interesting and attractive to the wearer of the bib or feeding apron thus decorated. If embroidered, a rather heavy quality of wash cotton should be chosen for the work.

CRUISE AROUND THE WORLD

Picturesque Lands and People on the Great Belt Line.

Egypt and the Nile Country.

By WM. G. FRIZZELL.

The lure of strange lands and peoples is felt by most of us on our first acquaintance with the pictures in the school geographies. To make a trip around the world had seemed scarcely possible on this floating hotel. The cabin had a homelike air. With the problem of constant packing and unpacking, which is the horror of ordinary travel, done away with, we simply made our home on the great founder of an exploit than a visit to Egypt and about as unattainable. An announcement in a newspaper about a year ago placed the matter in an entirely new light. A great floating hotel, I learned, was to carry half a thousand people around the world with all, or rather, more than, the comforts of home, while every difficulty of travel had been smoothed away in advance. The difficulties of making a hundred railroad and steamship connections and making oneself understood in a babel of languages made an around the world trip formidable. Even the cost of this inspiring journey had been brought within the reach of my moderate resources. I could live aboard a palatial ocean liner more cheaply than at an ordinary hotel, with upward of 25,000 miles of transportation thrown in.

native life was the only life. Now Cairo is as fashionable in dress as any European city, but it is in a transition state. In the outlying districts the forked stick is still a plow, and the camel and donkey are equally yoked together. At Cairo, however, the boys with trained monkeys are still present. The open air cafes are always crowded. A trip to the pyramids brought us to the very center of the greatest achievements of history. The pyramids have been despoiled of their beauty by vandals, but have been away their smooth casing of granite for the construction of mosques and the walls of the citadel. They have left the surface an irregular and shapeless line of steps. The conquering armies after using them as quarries have not, however, detracted from their immensity. The exploration of the interior was more trying, but likewise more remunerative. Provided with candles, electric lamps, Baedekers and pistols, we climbed the north side to the entrance, forty feet above the base. From this point we made a rapid descent into the interior below the line of the surface.

Titled After Eight Years

By WINIFRED BLACK.

The woman who wrote me today is 18 years old, she says. She's been in love with a man and the same man all the time for eight years.

Mrs. Edward Valentine Lee and her husband, the former United States navy paymaster's clerk, who has been sentenced to prison after pleading guilty to charges of taking $46,000 from the treasury of the battleship Georgia while at Guantanamo. His bride of a few days has declared that she will remain loyal to him, no matter how long he may be forced to stay in prison. They were married in Buffalo, N. Y., after he had been arrested there following a chase by federal officers that extended all over the eastern part of the country.

the boys at school used to write on the board:

"First the sense and then the silly; Mary Blank and Jiggling Willie."

And Mary pretended to be mad and Willie chased the boy who wrote the doggerel and gave him really quite a respectable thrashing.

And then Mary graduated at High school. There was no name to the beautiful bouquet that came up to her on the stage at the end of her essay, but she knew, and every one in the school house knew, that it was Willie who sent it to her.

And then Willie said he was going west to make his fortune, and he kissed Mary goodby and Mary laughed with the tears in her eyes and told him to write soon, and he wrote often for eight years.

He told Mary all about the new town where he had gone and the queer people in it, and every time his salary was raised Mary cried for joy and went and told all the neighbors all about it.

And now Willie has written to Mary. He didn't sign his name "Willie" to this letter; he signed it "William," and he says in the letter that he thinks he and Mary have made a mistake and that they had better not be married after all, and poor Mary doesn't know what in the world to do.

She has given up the idea of any other man, she says. She never went anywhere with any one but Willie, and she wouldn't know how to act with a stranger man for company.

"What shall I do?" she says in a letter to me. "Give him up without a word, forget all the years that have gone and everything that has made life beautiful to me for eight long years? It doesn't seem fair; it doesn't seem right. What shall I do?"

Why, my poor Mary, what in the world can you do but write this Willie of yours a nice, friendly letter telling him that he is quite right and that you are very much relieved to think he sees it, too? There's nothing else for you to do and keep your own self-respect.

And when you have written the letter and sent it, so somewhere and say a quiet little prayer of thanksgiving for your deliverance from an unhappy marriage. Be thankful to Willie for telling you the truth, now, before it's too late. He probably walked the floor for weeks getting up his courage to send that letter.

Another woman:

Very likely. What are you going to do about it? Your Willie cares more for the other woman than he does for you. Be glad that he had the courage and the honesty to help you out of a miserable position.

And then?

And then the world will be a very dull place for you for a while. You'll mourn and you'll cry.

I'd go away somewhere if I were you, somewhere among strangers where you ple won't ask you what's the matter every time you look the way you feel. And then, in six months you'll be wondering what on earth you felt so dreadfully about. Willie isn't the only man in the world, and if he was, many people have lived and died in peace and comparative happiness without the bitter-sweet comfort of love at all.

Be a woman, Mary; be a real woman. Laugh, take an interest in things, and forget Willie.

The chances are that six months after he has married the other girl he'll be sneaking out to the barn to sit down alone awhile and think about you.

Which would you rather be then—the wife he's tied to, or yourself?

EDWARD'S DEDUCTION

"Edward, you must eat the crusts of your bread."

"Did you eat crusts when you were a little boy?"

"Why, certainly I did."

"And is that why you are so fat?"

THE FRAUDS OF THE FRAUDS

made in an East Side cellar, "vin ordinaire" compounded of grape juice and poisons; "imported brandy," the cunning product of western dealers in dead wood alcohol; "Swiss cordials," which the pious distillers of the Alps wouldn't recognize as even a decent imitation of Italian, French or "Christ" ("tears of Christ"), distilled in a pagan Peruvian word; "Havana cigars de luxe" of rankest Porto Rican weed and upstate manufacture such as some of the extraordinary exhibits of a chamber of horrors at No. 141 Broadway—exhibits that would affright and turn to temperate ways even the Jack Falstaffs of the city could they spend half a day there and learn of the poisons that they daily imbibe, smoke, chew or eat. The museum of fakes has been put together by the Trademark Protective company as a result of many raids upon dishonest dealers.

Talk about cheating at a horse trade, flimflamming in a real estate deal or shearing lambs on the stock exchange! Why, those are venial petty swindles compared with the gigantic conspiracy against the American palate and the American stomach of which the adulterators and counterfeiters of food, drink and tobacco are guilty. Have we a pure food and drugs law? Oh yes. The label is on every bottle. The "good" manufacturers have their serial numbers assigned by the government. But between law and fact, between promise and performance, an abyss yawns. The counterfeiters now forge the pure food label as well as the trademarks of the original makers. A few federal inspectors do what they can to stop the well-nigh universal evil. A series of raids has been begun. The Trademark Protective company, the legal organization spoken of as active, as yet, however, the frauds still flourish and wax fat, though every now and then a few thousand labels, false trademarks of bottles are confiscated and a convicted counterfeiter is sentenced according to his deserts.

How the Fraud is Worked.

How are the frauds worked? Let us take the case of a chap who has recently acquired a bar and restaurant business in the city and whose ambition is to get rich quick. Comes to his bar a slick salesman of a shady wholesale liquor house. He orders a round or so of drinks and samples the stuff in stock. Then he quietly takes the saloonkeeper aside.

"See here," he says, and he doesn't bawl his message, either—"I can get you better stuff than that for $12 a case."

"It's the genuine goods," replies the saloonkeeper, and I pay $20 a case for it, I'm from Missouri, though," he adds, "and I'm looking for a bargain if you can show me."

"I couldn't have," a month ago," replies the salesman, "but last week our western house acquired a bankrupt stock of cognac, whiskies and French wines at half of cost prices. Listen! I'll send you a case of each kind. Prices, mind you, strictly confidential! And he whispers a price list of half a dozen sorts of trademarked goods that fairly astonishes the saloonkeeper.

The order is given, and when it arrives there isn't an interior branding or label in the whole consignment. My! that must have been a wonderful bankruptcy. The choicest sparklers of the champagne district, the Scotchies that have been distilled "by order of his Britannic majesty," the brandies that warm the cockles of the hearts of the Faubourg Saint Germain, the still wines, that made Bordeaux famous—there they are, or there they seem to be, in the event bottles, labels, wrappings and packages that are as good as new. The world around them is as well, too, as the high priced stuff. An occasional oldtimer, it is true, may register a kick, sure proof of his crankiness and failure to be abreast of the age. But the general public—the man in the street, whose faith in the label is overwhelming almost religious in its character—utters never a word of protest. The "bankrupt stock" handled by the western sharper is a go.

Meantime the saloon proprietor's education is proceeding rapidly. He's not in a position to call that westerner a liar, but he has his doubts. Twelve dollars a case? He thinks he must have put up the stuff at a cost of (say) $6 a case and is reaping 100 per cent profit. Why pay it? At this stage arrives a confidential circular from a New York house. They have double-discounted the Peorian's enterprise, and the saloon man finds he can make that $6 profit himself.

A Home Adulterator.

"Manufacture your own wines, liquors and cordials," writes this firm with admirable directness. "We show you how, give complete directions and furnish you with labels, wrappings and bottles of any kind desired." And, with this new method that he eagerly grasps, the saloonkeeper's education is complete. The western salesman must now try his arts on some other publican. Wood alcohol, cheap wine, carbonic acid gas, a few chemicals and most important of all, a full set of printing will suffice his old customer. The saloonkeeper has become an adulterator on his own account.

You will say, perhaps, that excessive fraud defeats itself. So it does. But the saloonkeeper is too sharp for that. He diverts suspicion by ordering from time to time small quantities of genuine goods from reputable firms. Real Scotch is opened occasionally. Ton, the hundredth man, may be the lucky one to get a real drink. Come again, and you are drinking from the identical bottle stuff that has been made in the cellar. Or more cautious still, the saloonkeeper may take pains never to serve his private concoction straight, but to pour it as an admixture into a quantity of the real stuff. One cask of port, diluted with alcohol and water, makes three casks of sham port. Fair game has everything but the bouquet of imported champagne, grape juice, alcohol and water does fair service as claret, with an admixture of the real claret to give it semblance.

The manufacturers and importers banded together to fight adulteration and counterfeiting of products say the practice is by no means confined to other receptacles whether the manufacture is a counterfeit.

In a room behind locked doors at No. 141 Broadway the Trademark Protective company keeps a museum of sample goods of all its confiscations. It would appear as if not a trademarked product of superior excellence is in existence but has its counterfeit duplicate here, with cunningly forged labels, capsules, corks, wrappings and the like to back up the seeming verity. And the work of exposure of the pirates, prosecution, conviction and sentence has, comparatively speaking, only just begun. A great many such cases are about to come up in the courts, and names of purveyors and caterers in good standing with the community are said to be involved in many of them. The process is a good deal like chasing the devil around a stump, because when one rascal has been put out of business in one part of the country another seemingly bobs up elsewhere.

Someone wrote a play or a book once about the extraordinary consequences that would ensue in case mankind had the scales of error removed from its eyes and everyone saw and spoke the truth. Just suppose that happened for a day to the makers and vendors of these faked products, and suppose that you, reader, were appointed to make the rounds with eyes and ears open. Stroll up Broadway and visit some of the places. Try first a 50-cent table wine.

"Ah, monsieur," says the Franco-German proprietor affably, "taste some of our celebrated vin ordinaire. The newspaper says they are such wags, call it red ink. My dear friend, it is not even ink! Prune juice, my dear sir, a little alcohol and water! It costs us 26 cents a gallon, I. O. B. Chicago, and that half-pint you are drinking there, not even a full half-pint, for you will note the hollow at the bottom of the bottle costs us 3 cents. Or won't you try our superior wine, just so-called, for it's made of cheap California alcohol and water, and is worth 25 cents a gallon? Twenty-five cents a bottle, we charge, and it costs us 10 cents. You cannot do much better. You have many other bargains equally delightful."

The next place is a cafe where you have now and again drunk your pony glees of cognac when you felt that you needed a "bracer." This trip the truthful proprietor dashes the fiery liquid from your lips, and in apology says: "Pardon me for my rudeness. Truth compels me to inform you that that stuff is diluted wood alcohol. If you require the benefit for it will kill you. A matter of six months use of it will cause you to go blind. What would I recommend? Well, Croton, the aqueous vulva of commerce is said to be very fine. At any rate, it cannot harm you." You stroll on and saunter into a fashionable uptown hostelry, the bar of which is your favorite rendezvous. What's this startling sight that meets your eyes? Upon the shelf where you customarily look for a much relished appetizer is a row of bottles decorated with skulls and crossbones and marked with the red word "Poison!"

"What sort of joke is this?" you stare at him and wonder. "No joke at all," he replies, soberly. "The boss heard these appetizers were all doped, and a government analyst to whom he applied found they all contained crude alcohol and poisonous chemicals. We put the 'poison' signs up there as a warning!"

You haven't much liquor appetite remaining, but you decide to try as a last resort an old-fashioned place which has borne a high reputation for handling straight goods.

More Confessions.

"Come right in," says the proprietor, cheerfully. "I'm not exactly in shape today, but I'll give you the best I have."

Looking up to see the best he has, you notice such labels as these on the case goods:

"Scotch whisky partly refilled with domestic."

"Port wine diluted and 10 per cent brandy added."

"Cognac adulterated with wood alcohol."

"French champagne a la Ohio."

"Artificial color composed of chemical ingredients."

The world seems to spin around you like a top, and in agitated tones you inquire: "Have you gone crazy, too?"

"Never had better sense in my life. Saw a light yesterday and decided to fool my customers no longer. Didn't have time to lay in new stock, so meanwhile I've put a truthful label on every bottle, and now if you'll tell me what you like I'll name its exact ingredients and let you know whether it's safe to drink it."

But what's the use? That might happen in a dream. Ere the millennium the man who drinks, smokes and eats must beware, and even so must take his chances of the vast mass of adulterated, counterfeited or poisonous stuff that is foisted in the name and liver of reputable, standard goods upon the American public.

The upright manufacturers have awakened to the fraud and the peril of these imitations, and now it is up to the people themselves to support this righteous crusade.

THE KING'S "EASY MONEY"

From the New York Sun.

The curious powers and duties of the coroner, under traditional law, are illustrated by a recent incident at Southgate, England. Some workmen digging in the Amberley road found a large number of ancient coins. Immediately the coroner was called, and he impaled a jury. An expert numismatist testified that the coins were Henry cross pennies of the reign of Henry III, 1267 to 1272. The jury then found a verdict that the coins were ancient, that they had been concealed, and that their depositor was unknown.

"Then I seize the coins as the king's treasure trove," said the coroner, and he did.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures.

"Favorite Prescription" is strictly non-alcoholic, non-acrid, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle in large, bold, and legible characters, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice.

Some of the numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of KNOWN COMPOSITION. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 31 one-cent stamps for cloth-bound copy.

MANASSEH'S WICKEDNESS AND PENITENCE

Lesson Two. Chronicles XXXIII 1-20. Golden Text: Isaiah I, 16, 17. "Cease to do evil; learn to do well." (1) Manasseh was twelve years old when he began to reign and he reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem. (2) And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, after the abomination of the heathen, whom the Lord cast out before the children of Israel. (3) For he built again the high places, which Hezekiah his father had broken down, and he reared up altars for the Baalim, and made Asherim; and worshipped all the host of heaven; and served them. (4) And he built altars in the house of the Lord, whereof the Lord said, In Jerusalem shall my name be forever. (5) And he built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the Lord. (6) He also made his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Manasseh; and he practiced augury, and used enchantments, and practiced sorcery, and dealt with them that had familiar spirits, and with wizards; he wrought much evil in the sight of the Lord, to provoke him to anger. (7) And he set the graven image of the idol, which he had made in the house of God, of which God said to David and to Solomon his son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name forever. (8) Neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from off the land which I have appointed for your fathers; if only they will observe to do all that I have commanded them; even all the law and the statutes, and the ordinances by the hand of Moses. (9) And Manasseh made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err, so that they did evil more than did the nations, whom the Lord destroyed, before the children of Israel. (10) And the Lord spake to Manasseh, even to his people; but they gave no heed. (11) Wherefore the Lord brought upon them the captains of the host of the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh in chains, and bound him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon. (12) And when he was in distress, he besought the Lord his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers. (13) And he prayed unto him; and he was intricated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh knew that the Lord he God. (14) Now after this he built an outer wall to the city of David, on the west side of Gihon, in the valley, even to the entering in at the fish gate; and he compassed about Ophel, and raised it up a very great height; and he put valiant captains in all the fenced cities of Judah. (15) And he took away the strange gods, and the idols which his fathers had made, and the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the Lord, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the city. (16) And he built up the altar of the Lord, and offered there sacrifices of peace offerings and of thanksgiving, and commanded Judah to serve the Lord, the God of Israel. (17) Nevertheless the people did sacrifice still in the high places, but only unto the Lord their God. (18) Now the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and his prayer unto his God, and the words of the seers that spake to him in the name of the Lord, the God of Israel, behold, they are written among the acts of the kings of Israel. (19) His prayer also, and how God was intricated of him, and all his sin and his trespass, and the places wherein he built high places, and set up the Asherim and the graven images, before he humbled himself; behold they are written in the history of Hezekiah. (20) So Manasseh slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house, and Amon his son reigned in his stead.

THE STORY:
After the great Passover, Hezekiah set himself yet more perfectly to the restoration of the worship of Jehovah throughout the land, by rearranging the courses of the priests and Levites, and leading the people in making provision for their needs, according to the law of Moses.

Then followed the invasion under Sennacherib, which had been considered in a previous lesson; an invasion which ended not only in the defeat of Assyria, but in the discomfiture of that political party in the state which had been opposed to the teaching of Isaiah, and had desired a league with Egypt. This was followed by a period of very remarkable prosperity, and again we see that such a period is more fraught with peril to those in power than are days of darkness and of trial. In the latter years of the reign of Hezekiah he manifested weakness and failure on more than one occasion. He died after a reign of nine and twenty years, and was undoubtedly considered as the greatest of the kings of Judah.

He was succeeded by his son, Manasseh, who ascended the throne at 12 years of age, and reigned for the long period of five and fifty years. The first part of his reign was characterized in a startling degree, by a return to courses of evil, absolutely reckless and appalling. He built again the high places which his father had broken down, reintroduced the worship of Baal, and even erected altars of idolatry in the courts of the temple. He added the sin of causing his children to pass through the fire, and gave himself up to all the black arts which were so strictly forbidden by the law of the Lord. The intensity of his evil doing is revealed in the declaration that he "made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err, so that they did evil more than did the nations, whom the Lord destroyed before the children of Israel."

A very brief word at this point is full of revelation of the patience of God: The Lord spake to Manasseh and to his people, but they gave no heed. The result of this persistence in rebellion was that judgment was in coming to the captains of Assyria, who took Manasseh bound with fetters to Babylon. Thus overtaken by judgment, the king came to a realization of his sin, and filled with penitence he prayed to Jehovah. This attitude of repentance was immediately answered by Jehovah in the restoration of the king to his kingdom. The outcome was that he brought forth works meant for repentance as he swept away the idolatry which he had reared and restored the altar of Jehovah which he had desecrated.

THE TEACHING:
So startling a chapter is this that it suggests an inquiry as to what these stories of the kings of Israel and Judah teach concerning the power of heredity. It is indeed an arresting fact that this Manasseh, the son of Hezekiah, should so flagrantly go back upon his father's example, and persistently undo what his father had done. Yet as we are astonished at this, we remember that Hezekiah himself was the son of a man by comparison weak, and the grandson of the most evil king that Judah had. We also remember that when Manasseh came to the throne he was only 12, and that in all probability the personal influence of his father on him, was that of those later years in his life, when there were evidences of weakening of character.

It is a story such as this, and indeed such as all those of the kings of Israel, seem to compel us to modify our conception of the power of heredity, and to emphasize the forces of influence or environment.

It is interesting, while considering these matters, to notice that the repentance of Manasseh suggests the presence in his nature of undercurrents of nobility, which had been inoperative during the years of his evil course. Yet is not all such consideration speculative and of little value? After all, the teaching of Ezekiel at a later date is supreme when in his captivity the scattered children of Israel blamed their fathers for their suffering in the proverb, "The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge." He replied thereto by declaring in the words of Jehovah, "All souls are mine," and taught that the evil son of a good man is punished; and the good son of an evil man is not.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

All this consideration makes the golden text in this connection of great value as the vehicle of the supreme teaching of the lesson. The citation from the first messages of Isaiah, of the words, "Cease to do evil; learn to do well," emphasizes personal responsibility, which after all, is the only practical matter. Whatever may have been the cause of Manasseh's evil courses, they resulted in punishment, and whatever may have been the cause of his penitence, it was immediately responded to by the pardon and restoration of God.

In view of these facts, which are the most patent in this story as in the whole of this history, it becomes evident that to complain about heredity, environment, or influence, is utterly foolish, and it is equally futile to trust in any of these things.

Every man has God and volition, or the power of will, as the supreme factors for his making or unmaking. The attitude of God toward him will depend entirely upon the attitude of his will toward God.

If he turn from the right and choose evil there will fall upon him the just judgment of Jehovah. On the other hand, if he "cease to do evil, and learn to do well," all the resources of God are at his disposal to enable him to succeed in his effort and to place him in the position of a true and abiding prosperity.

REMBRANDT'S HOUSE IS BEING RESTORED

From the Mündus.
Within a short time Amsterdam will possess a new attraction to lovers of art. The house where Rembrandt lived from 1629 to 1668, and where he passed the most happy years of his married life with Saskia van Ulbenberg, is being restored, and arranged as a small Rembrandt museum. The historical building, long much neglected, became the property some time ago of a society and is now being restored under the direction of a famous architect.

Rembrandt had a great passion for collecting, and the house at Amsterdam during his life contained innumerable treasures; the walls were covered with pictures by Carracci, Raphael, Michelangelo, Norvello, Bruegel, Hals, Tiepolo, Verelst, etc. There were a great number of curious arms, prints by Lucas Mantegna, Raphael, Michelangelo, Tempesta, Titian, Durer, Holbein, Van Dyck, Rubens, Morevelt and Callot, an almost complete collection. One of the most interesting features of the house is a collection of Rembrandt's own works, which he had gathered together, and which he had arranged as a small museum, where chiefly etchings and drawings, about 70 in all, by the great painter will be on view.

PERSONAL LIBERTY

From the Journal American Medical Association.
Legislation limiting woman's labor to 54 hours a week is opposed by a representative of a manufacturers' association on grounds of pure chivalry—because this official is for woman, and believes in placing no restriction whatever on her activities. He is reluctant to align himself with those who profess to feel that the woman who works is a menace to the community, and who is a source of suspicion when they see a representative of a manufacturers' association suddenly aroused to tender concern for the abstract rights of womanhood, or when they see the same association generously and disinterestedly engaged in vindicating those rights. Doubtless the members of the association are perfectly sincere in their belief that they know better what is good for women than do the sociologists and physicians who have studied the question. We are even ready to credit these manufacturers with faith in the amusing arguments of their representative. The human mind is organized with a marvelous and almost unlimited capacity for belief.

The arguments in favor of "emancipating" woman by permitting her to work 12, 14, 16 or even 18 hours a day if the fancy strikes her (and if she can find a kind-hearted employer willing to humor her little whim, seem good material for the cartoonists and paragraphers, but too flimsy to deserve refutation in a serious periodical; and, indeed, we should not mention them except to show the underlying assumption is one which still has a great many persons, and one on which the opponents of public health measures always rely. This assumption is that law is the only social agency which interferes with the freedom of the individual, and that a law prohibiting an individual from doing any act necessarily limits that individual's liberty. Compulsory vaccination, government supervision over foods and drugs, the compulsory reporting of contagious diseases—in fact, almost all measures for the public welfare—are bitterly denounced on the liberty of the individual. In the present instance, a few sorely misguided philanthropists are determined that working women shall not be allowed to work with an unprofitable abstract right which the latter would like to exchange for more practical freedom.

It will be a gain for the world when the academic concept of absolute liberty departs at least to that limit apart for theoretical abstractions which have no relation to practical affairs. Absolute liberty is as impossible of achievement as a perfect vacuum, and as inconsistent with the conditions of life. We live in the midst of conditions, physical, social, economic and legal; and often a technical prohibition is actual release from oppressive compulsion. Effective freedom is built up as much of limitations as of opportunities. No one can draw breath and be entirely ignorant of this principle, yet so many disregard it that it is worth a hint for those who are work-device of gold thread, as fine as a cobweb, being also worked on the upstanding collar, to which a plying of black is once more an effective addition. A black satin which is folded high up about the waist, its fringed ends looped at the left side all of which is distinctly effective; though such a coat is, of course, only suited to wear with a rather limited number of dresses, and could not by any possibility be slipped over a tailored coat and skirt costume in the accommodating way which the average woman demands of her wraps.

However, so many different tastes and occasions have to be provided for that I present this new idea to your consideration for what it is worth—this, literally being a considerable amount in hard cash, seeing that it is the latest creation of one of our most famous fashion makers, who is furthermore responsible for the introduction of a very striking race coat of dark blue surah silk, trimmed with enormously wide reversible ribbon.

* AM sending you to-day sketches of two of the newest gowns for the Summer season. One of them — a very chic creation, is of a white-corded silk. The skirt has panels at the sides of blue chiffon over gray gathered into deep bands of gray satin.

The coat has the new high collar and revers of gray, and has the chiffon let into the coat as on the skirt. I do not think we shall give a very hearty welcome to the high collar again, although the design shown is perhaps less objectionable than former styles, on account of the open front.

The other is a charming tunic gown. The sketch shows how the tunic and the half-corset are drawn into a round buckle made of the material.

The underskirt and one-half of the corset are of clare de lune blue Charmeuse and the tunic is of emerald green chiffon embroidered in tarnished silver spots. The girldie is of dull mauves of different shades. Worn with a black and white hat with a small, dull mauve velvet bon at the side the costume is irresistible.

With the many pretty new suits there is plenty of room for choice. There is, for instance, the notable new creation modelled on that "Highwayman" coat, whose picturesqueness has hitherto been almost exclusively monopolized by the small boy. Now, however, the full-grown woman of fashion can array her-

Why Fear of Death Drives Men to Suicide

A FEW weeks ago a man in New York committed suicide because he feared he was to be murdered. One would imagine that death at the hands of another would be no worse than death self-inflicted, and that, at any rate, the chances of escaping the former would be great enough under almost any conditions to deter one from seeking the latter.

But this man, Morris Gints by name, when threatened with murder could see no other outlet but suicide. His case is a remarkable one, and shows to what lengths men may go when obsessed with fear.

GINTS was a detective in the service of a great railroad. He was a brave man and always did his duty. Why, then, should he kill himself or hate. It is inherited by every man, woman and child from our forefathers in the beginning of the world.

"But even a highly educated man or woman may be afraid of certain things." A man who does a great deal of walking about the city streets may be afraid of automobiles. He has read a thousand newspaper accounts of persons being run down by motor cars, and he cannot help connecting them with himself. Perhaps he has actually witnessed such an accident, and has been a witness of the victim.

Of course, he knows that so long as he keeps on the sidewalk he is safe, but at every block he has to cross the open street.

"Such a fear works on the mind, if the mind be in a condition to permit such working. It also can pro-

Perhaps he has actually witnessed such an accident, and has become himself the victim. Of course, he knows the so-called safe places, and knows that as long as he keeps on the sidewalk he is safe, but at every block he has to cross the open street.

"Burning with the thought of revenge, the man with the number has been biding his time."

The reason given by those who know has to do with another man—a nameless man a man with a number instead of a name. Within the grim walls of Sing Sing Prison this man without a name is serving five years at hard labor because he was a murderer. The records of his trial show that the chief witness against him—the man on whose testimony he was convicted—was Morris Gletz, the railroad detective.

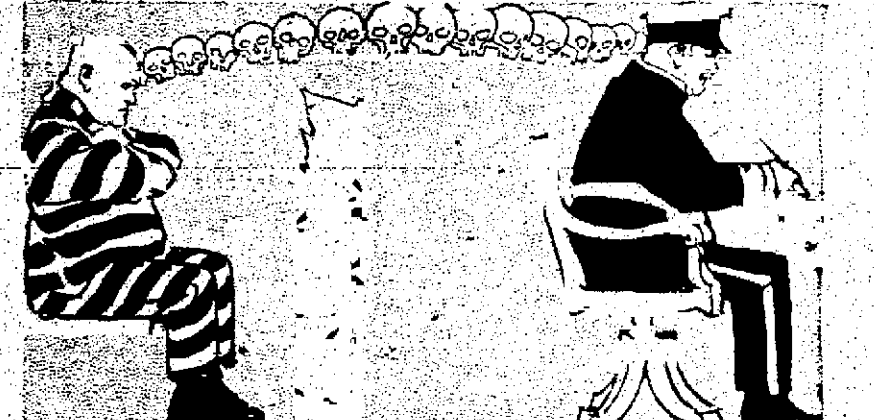

Burning with the thought of revenge, fired by the desire to "get square" with Morris for having put him behind the bars, the man with a number has been biding his time. One day he stole the pen and ink to write a letter to some friend in the free world outside the walls, and in each letter the prisoner sent a little message to Morris, the man who had deprived him of freedom.

"Tell the Twinkler I'm going to duce an effect on the body, but only through the mind.

"When a person experiences a sudden shock of fright the common physical effects are a knocking of the knees, a 'cold sweat,' and so on. These effects are due to the action of fear upon the glands. The so-called 'cold sweat' is due to a sudden over-charging of blood in the sweat glands, the blood being driven from the heart in response to the unusual impulse of the shock on the brain. The sweat glands, being surcharged, secrete in a moment moisture which ordinarily would be secreted much more slowly.

The knocking together of the knees and other effects of this fright are caused in a different way. The whole action of all bodily functions is controlled by the brain through the various nerve centres. At regular intervals the brain automatically directs the performance

"Some day the gates of Sing Sing would open, and the message, repeated again and again, once a month, with unceasing regularity.

"The Twinkler" is the name by which Morris is said to have been known to the nameless man and others of his kind. Morris was a detective, well versed in the slang of crooks; he knew what the nameless man meant when he wrote that he was going to "get" him. Some day the gates of Sing Sing would open, and then—look out, Morris Glatz!

The words of the message assumed a personal form; they became a personal threat: "I'm going to get you, Twinkler!" Day after day they rang in Morris's ears, as though the nameless man were whispering to him and he were

"But a shock or a strong impulse of terror may so paralyze the brain that this regular control is suspended, or at least made irregular. Then the nerves have to shift for themselves, and as a result they, too, become panic-stricken. The knees, not getting the definite orders to which they are accustomed, wobble like a ship without a rudder.

"But this is in the case of sudden fright only. Cases of prolonged fear, of constant and growing terror, often resulting in suicide, must be considered by themselves.

"In the case of Morris Glatz it would seem that his mind must have been in a pathological condition which made him very prone to fear. Certainly all medical experience tends to show that the mind

"It's not with me, but, Clatsco, I see no other way but to came the day when Morris, as his friends tell it, lost his nerve and "got" himself.

But why? Why didn't he take his chance with the tender of the marriage?

The answer is given by a man who ought to know the head of the greatest psychopathic ward in the world. This is the explanation given by Dr. M. S. Gregory, physician in charge of the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital.

"Fear is an emotion," said Dr. Gregory, "just as powerful as love attempts suicide whose mind is perfectly healthy."

A threat, as in the case mentioned, may so work upon the man's mind that he finally imagines it about to be fulfilled, and in desperation tries to fulfill the fulfillment by taking his own life.

"But so far as medical explanation, people do not commit suicide even through fear, if they are perfectly healthy," concluded Dr. Gregory, who is making a study and analysis of the subject in the psychopathic ward at Bellevue.

THE STAG F

Helen Ware in a New Play

Clyde Fitch's last drama, "The City," will have its first production in this city at the Opera House Monday night by the Theodore Lorch Stock company. Few plays in recent years have called forth the comment and against which "The City" has. In this place Fitch dealt with a big theme in a very fine manner. The enterprise of the Lorch company in presenting such a drama is commendable.

Power of the City

A Speech From Clyde Fitch's Play Setting Forth the Strength of the City.

THE following speech, taken from the last act of Clyde Fitch's "The City," which the Lorch Stock company will present at the Opera House this week, sums up the idea of this great drama in a very clear and concise fashion. A small-town family has moved to the city to have the advantages of metropolitan life, firmly believing that the small town cramps and prevents development. The city has proven disastrous to the various members of the family. In the last act one of the characters philosophizes as follows:

"No. You are wrong. Let us be honest with ourselves today. It's not the city's fault; it is our own. What the city does is to bring out what is strongest in us. If at heart we are good, the good in us will win. If the bad is strongest, God help us. Do not blame the city. She gives man his opportunity. It is up to him what he makes of it. A man can live in a small town all his life and deceive the whole place and himself into thinking he has all the virtues, when at heart he is a hypocrite. The village gives him no chance to find it out; to prove it to his fellows. The small town is too easy. But the city! A man goes to the gates of the city and knocks: New York or Chicago, Boston or San Francisco, no matter what city, so long as it is big and busy and selfish and self-centered. She comes to her gates and takes him in. She stands him in the middle of her market place, where Wall street and Herald square and Fifth avenue and the Bowery, Harlem and Forty-second street all meet and there she strips him of all his disguises and all his hypocrisies and she paints his ambition on her fences, and lights up her skyscrapers with it; what he wants to be and what he thinks he is. Then she says to him: 'Make good if you can, or lie with you. And what is in him comes out to clothe his nakedness. To the city he can't lie. I know because I tried.'"

Portrait of a Great Critic

Here is a little pen picture of the greatest critic that ever lived by one of the greatest critics of everything that ever lived—in other words a description of William Hazlitt by Samuel Taylor Coleridge, quoted from Turnbull's "Coleridge's Biographical Epistolary" (The Macmillan Company):

"Dear Wedgwood: William Hazlitt is a thinking, observant, original man; of great power as a painter, of character-portraits, and far more in the manner of the old painters than any living artist, but the objects must be before him. He has no imaginative memory; so much for his intellectual. His manners are to ninety-nine in one hundred singularly repulsive: brown hanging shoe-contemplating-strange. Sharp seemed to like him, but Shag saw him for only half an hour, and that walking. He is, I verily believe, kindly natured; is very fond of, attentive to, and patient with children, but he is jealous, gloomy, and of an irritable pride. With all this there is much good in him. He is disinterested; an enthusiastic lover of the great men who have been before us. He says things that are his own, and though from habitual shyness, and the outside of bear skin, at least of misanthropy, he is strangely confused and dark in his conversation, and delivers himself of almost all his conceptions with a force, yet he says more than any man I ever knew (you yourself only excepted) of that which is his own. When he has warmed his mind, and the juice is come out, and spread over his spirits, he will gallop for half an hour together, with real eloquence. He sends well-feathered thoughts a straight forward to the mark with a twang of the howitzer."

William B. Mack will impersonate General Grant in Dustin and William Farman's production of "The Littlest Rebel."

Napoleon in Drama

Comment on a New Play Dealing With This Great Man.

Writing of the treatment of the great enigma, Napoleon, by Carl Hauptmann, brother of Gerhardt, in his two new Napoleonic dramas of five acts each, Dr. von Brunek gives this epitome in a German newspaper:

"Even Carl Hauptmann cannot solve the riddle. The Napoleon in the play contradicts our own conceptions. The poet gives us his Napoleon. That is right as a poet and a man; but the difference between Hauptmann's view and our own clearly indicates the difficulties involved. Napoleon is still far too alive to our own generation; he is too close to us, too nearly related, to make it possible for anyone to portray him in a manner so suggestive that we must confess: He was such and none other. A great historical personality can be represented truthfully and greatly for the appreciation of all, only when it has become mythical. We have no proper perspective with regard to men who, like Frederick the Great and Napoleon, still live in immediate spiritual contact with us, even if their bodies have long since gone the way of all things carnal. The closeness of Napoleon to our own time is a handicap that no poet, not even the greatest, can overcome. Carl Hauptmann well knew this and carefully restrained himself from deserting the firm soil of historical fact for the alluring morass of fancy or of myth."

Hauptmann presents a panorama of Napoleon's life from Corsica to St. Helena, allowing the Deutsche Monats-Zeitung remarks, "historical truth in form supreme like a statue wrought in iron overlooking a garden filled with sunshine. The charm of the work is in the milieu through which the heroic figure of the Corsican stalks, pursued by gigantic dreams. Here and there we note the silhouette of a woman, a celestial peace blossoms for the moment under Italian skies and in the Orient. But these moments are invariably interrupted by the noise of war and the panic fear of the nations. Thrones totter, men are like frightened herds."

At Local Playhouses This Week

Clyde Fitch's "The City" at the Opera House.

"Under Two Flags" at the Opera House.

Vaudeville at the Majestic.

By J. R. H.

AN INTERESTING event of the week is the first production in this city of Clyde Fitch's last play, "The City," at the Opera House by the Theodore Lorch Stock company. In "The City" Fitch attempted to show the demoralizing effect the city has upon humanity. This he failed to do, for his plot and characters merely show the development of fundamental faults within themselves rather than in the city. However, this may be "The City" is a vital play, a big idea, worked out in a manner which proves that off-made statement: that Clyde Fitch had in himself the ability of becoming more than a stage journalist, more than a mere reporter of his age; a dramatist of unusual worth and power. "Under Two Flags" will be produced at the Opera House the latter part of the week.

The Majestic will offer its usual bill of Sullivan and Considine vaudeville. Manager Tammen announces that he has secured for the near future at his popular theater, a pantomime act. This act is imported from England and is said to be one of the finest of its sort ever sent to this country. There is no more enjoyable entertainment than real pantomime, so the coming of this act will be awaited with much expectation.

The regular winter season at the Opera House will open the middle of September. The opening attraction has not been announced, but in all probability it will be one of last season's big New York successes. Indications point to a very fine season for the Opera House, as the majority of the better attractions will visit the Pacific coast territory this season. It is probable, though this announcement is not official, that among the early bookings will be Henry Miller, "The Love Tales of Hoffman," "The Commuters," Trilix Friganza, "Everywoman," "Excuse Me," and Leslie Carter.

"The City" at Opera House

One of the most important productions ever made in stock in this city is that of Clyde Fitch's last play, "The City," which the Theodore Lorch company will present at the Opera House this week for four nights and one matinee only, commencing Monday night with a matinee Wednesday afternoon. "The City" is the last work of the late Clyde Fitch. It was first produced in New York city a year ago last fall, after the author's death. The drama was the sensation of the season and had a long run in New York and other large eastern cities. It has never been seen in the west. The Lorch production of the play marks its entry into this territory.

The theme of "The City" is a big, vital idea. The writer's intention was to show the effect of city life upon humanity. He takes for this purpose a prosperous family living in a small uptown village and brings it to New York. The development is logical if somewhat morbid. In some respects "The City" is the greatest play Clyde Fitch ever wrote. It is evident, however, that the dramatist did not finish the play and that another hand completed the drama for public presentation. The stroke of the master is evident throughout, the last act being one of the finest pieces of work Fitch ever did. It is broad and big. It shows a decided advancement in thought and in technical powers. It heralded a new era in Fitch's mental development. Had this man lived he would no doubt have become a greater writer, a man of greater powers than he had shown in previous works.

Everyone should see "The City." Though it is bold and daring in places, it is a big idea, one well worth pondering upon. It makes men and women think and opens up new vistas in life. "The City" shows a most commendable spirit for this is quite an undertaking for a stock company in a city of this size.

Vaudeville at Majestic

One wonders, after seeing the new show which opened a week ago last night at the Majestic yesterday, whether the people of Colorado Springs really realize what sterling vaudeville, both as regards quality and quantity, Manager Tammen of the Majestic is presenting at prices that are not possibly to be any lower, and undoubtedly much considering the prices of this week.

New York Production Later

By EMORY B. CALVERT.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Moving picture stock companies are the salvation stations to which hundreds of jobless thespians look for succor during their long period of enforced vacation. Their booking offices are daily crowded with sweltering "hamlets," who crowd and packed one another in eager endeavor to get an audience with the booking agent.

This recourse to the hated "pictures" on the part of the "profession" is viewed by the older members as nothing short of iconoclastic. From time immemorial, "art," of the dramatic genus has shirked all things that savored of the commonplace, and since the inception of the moving picture theater, with its steady parade upon drama of the cheaper order, there has been a cry of protest from the thousands separated from their weekly salaries by the fantastic shapes that dance on canvas for the small sum of a nickel.

This howl of disapproval, however, has now waned to mere murmurs of remonstrance. No longer do the long-haired gentry launch their diatribes against the "proletarian popularity" of the films; and no longer does "cathartic temperament" prohibit thespians from booking in "picture stock." The cause of this change of tone is but the natural influence the evolution of a growing industry has wrought upon the drama.

From an infant project, whose popularity put a few small melodramatic theaters out of business, the moving picture industry has grown to such proportions that it now employs whole stock companies of actors, many of them of the first order, and pays salaries tempting even to those accustomed to the fat pay checks that originally invariably commanded from managers. But most alluring of all, perhaps, is the steady employment of—tered. Picture stock companies play the whole year round. There are no long-enforced vacations; to drain the pockets of the actors, and no painful disintegration in the lowly parts of the circuit to harass his peace of mind.

Just now, with Broadway, between Forty-second and Fifty-ninth streets, resembling a river of molten asphalt, and an unprecedented full in theatrical activity, actors, especially those whose prodigality has failed to provide for the dull season, are only too glad to seek the shelter of "picture stock." They flock in droves to the booking agencies, and pester the office force with all the vigor that made the old-time vaudeville booking agency office boy the sorriest of his species.

The new occupation pays well, too. Stars, real stars of the pictures, must be faultlessly beautiful, pre-eminently versatile, and good actors—without, receive from $200 to $400 per week, while the other members of the company scale down to the $30 mark.

"Picture stock" accounts for the astonishingly few actors of the jobless, hopelessly famished genus that were wont to loiter on the corner of Broadway and regale all listeners with tales of exploits that rivaled the yarns of Sindbad.

"Get-Rich-Quick-Wallington" is the seventh wonder of the theatrical world. Despite a heat that has closed the doors of nearly every playhouse in the city, this laughter-producing piece continues its career of money making at Cohan's theater.

This marathon production of theatrical circles started its career last September, and has been going strong ever since, greatly to the wonder of managers and actors alike, for there have been few plays of the past that have obtained a popularity that carried them successfully through the hot weather of the metropolis.

Considerable interest has been manifested in theatrical circles over the announcement that Miss Helen Lackaye, the talented sister of James and Wilton Lackaye, has been selected to play the part of "Light" in next season's production of "The Blue Bird."

EMORY CALVERT BY

One of the newest innovations of New York's theatrical managers has been the introduction of linen coats. These may be had in exchange for one's regular street garment at the Victoria roof. In these days, when a pipe line from the Arctic would mean a fortune to the happy possessor, such an introduction is nothing less than the coup d'état in thespian circles.

That the patrons of the Victoria appreciate the linen substitutes for the conventional is amply evidenced in the increased box office receipts.

There have been two more victims of the long list of theatrical "heat prostrations" in the metropolis. These are the Folies Bergere and the Winter Garden.

The Folies will be closed until July 31, when it will open with a new bill. The Winter Garden will not open until some time during the latter part of August.

Miss Blanche Ring is the latest star to announce her engagement for the coming winter. She is to have the stellar part in "A Wall Street Girl," and she has taken a small place in town that she may assist in the play's revision.

The success of Bessie McCoy's turn at Ziegfeld's "Polka of 1911," now playing at the Jardin de Paris, has again brought to light the efficiency of wide advertising.

Miss McCoy is the first animated "Daffydil"—the flesh and blood portrayal of a series of quips now being run in one of the great New York dailies. Their popularity is closely rivaled by the applause accorded her.

Latest Gossip of the Theaters

Edward Knobloch's "Kismet," the Sensation of London. George Alexander Is Knighted. Lily Elsie Coming to America. Other Notes.

By J. R. H.

At this season of the year managers and players are busy with plans for next season. Productions are being built for new plays and for the road acts of last season's successes. Play-ers are busy preparing for new or old plays. The beginning of each season is always marked with an optimistic outlook and the promises of managers and stars are always alluring. Naturally, these plans do not always mature, but the good intentions are creditable, even if but few materialize.

Last season saw the production of the usual number of good and bad plays. It is gratifying to note that the better class of attractions were the most successful financially. The most substantial successes of the New York season were pieces that are now worthy because of the absence of vulgarity and commonness.

The past season locally brought some very fine attractions to this city. With such plays as "The Third Degree," "The Spenhthrift," "Her Husband's Wife," "Mary Jane's Pa," "The Eastest Way," "The Witching Hour," "The Fortune Hunter," "The Nigger," "Madame X," "The Newly Found Monk," and "Mrs. Bump (and Leigh)," with such stars as Henry Miller, Francis Starr, Max Elman, John Mason, Lillian Russell, Jefferson de Angella, De Wolf Hopper, James T. Powers, Countess de Swirsky, Florence Roberts, Francis Wilson, Raymond Hitchcock, Ruth St. Denis, John Drew, Sarah Bernhardt, Ethel Barrymore and Mrs. Fiske, and with such musical plays of merit as "The Dollar Princess," "The Arcadians," "The Merry Widow" and "The Chocolate Soldier," Colorado Springs had a theatrical season probably unrivaled in any city of the size in this country. The next season will bring forth equally as good if not better bookings is the promise of Manager Nye of the Opera House.

"Kismet" a Sensation

LONDON, July 7.—The play to which all London is running, crowding the theatre in spite of the very hot weather, is "Kismet," Edward Knobloch's Arabian Nights. The play has a true Eastern flavor, and is full of powerful, highly colored incidents and humorous episodes, presented with the most unctuous and delightful humor. It is essentially a love story, portraying the love of a very powerful Caliph, an admirably good man, handsome, just and omnipotent, who selects for his wife a girl of lovely birth, innocent, charming, with rather a strong character for an Eastern girl. The principal character is Hajj, the beggar, most vividly portrayed by Oscar Asche. The period embraced by the play from dawn to sunset. The production is admirable from every viewpoint. It is full of color without being overburdened with details. A fine and assured taste has guided the hand of the producer. The costumes are lovely. The play on the whole is very well acted, though outside of Mr. Asche and Miss Braxton the speech of the actors is nearly unintelligible.

Anna Held is known from ocean to ocean—and beyond. Popularity has bound many leaves into her laurel wreath, even to naming a brand of cigars for her. Since her successful run in Miss Innocence, which closed in the spring of 1910, Miss Held has been withheld from the stage, but next autumn she will open in a new farce adapted by George V. Hobart from the French. Her reappearance will doubtless be the cue for all sorts of applause as she has had a faithful clientele ever since her American debut at the Herald Square Theatre, in "A Parlor Match" on September 21, 1895. Her previous career had made her familiar through the music halls of London and continental Europe.

Alexander Is Knighted

Among the forty new knights added to the coronation year by George V. is George Alexander, the well-known English actor-manager. George Alexander (Le Barry) will act in this country next season will be an English farce, "The Princess of St. James's," entitled "The Lady of Dreams."

Theatre, producing there, among other plays, "Lady Windemere's Fan," "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "Faust," and "The Two Pigeons." "The Thief" and this season "The Witness for the Defense." He was a member of the London Country Council in 1907, and holds numerous offices in theatrical and charitable organizations.

The greatest of English pantomime companies, presenting a performance exactly as it has been given in one of the leading London music halls, is the unusual attraction in store for Colorado Springs theatergoers through the enterprise of Manager Tammen of the Majestic theater in booking for the week beginning the coming Saturday the celebrated Fred Karno's London Pantomime company.

Pantomime acts have been seen in this city, but nothing to compare in size or excellence with this great production which is drawing $800 a week all over the Sullivan and Considine circuit and is the highest priced act ever brought to a vaudeville house in Colorado Springs, or for that matter, in any vaudeville house in the average city half a dozen times as large. Booked by the London office of Sullivan and Considine, this act has proved the biggest sensation ever put on the circuit, and everywhere has been filling the S. and C. houses to capacity at every performance. From a comedy standpoint the act is pronounced by critics in every city visited as absolutely the most comically funny thing ever put on a vaudeville stage.

The production is literally a play within a play, for the stage is set as the stage and the auditorium of a theater and for the entertainment of those in the boxes a complete musical hall program is brought off. It is the richest kind of comedy, for between the pseudo audience in the boxes and the performers on the make-believe stage there is kept up a hot fire of persiflage and pointed comment that is excruciatingly ludicrous.

Of course it is not necessary to say that the "persiflage and pointed" comment are silent, for in pantomime not a word is spoken. With a company of no less than 25 clever English artists the pantomime is so expressive and clear to even the dullest comprehension that spoken words could not come near producing the same mirth-provoking effect.

Among the plays in which Miss Elman (Le Barry) will act in this country next season will be an English farce, "The Princess of St. James's," entitled "The Lady of Dreams."

DANBURY, TEXAS

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH DANBURY, BRAZORIA CO., TEXAS?

Nothing in the world only we have been too busy in Texas to tell you about this garden of the Gulf Coast Country, and what you have missed by not taking a trip of our land.

We have, I think, the best location in the Gulf Coast, and if you will go down there and investigate you will say the half has not been told.

We have yet over 100 20-acre tracts near Danbury, all facing upon a graded street, prices ranging from $55.00 to $50.00 per acre. I also have about 10,000 acres of land near Danbury, ranging in price from $25.50 per acre to $35.00, and in tracts from 80 acres to 1,000. These can be bought for a reasonable payment down, balance on time.

Danbury is growing fast and you can get no better investment than some of our town lots or residence blocks. We are only 44 miles from Houston, the best town in Texas, and only 25 miles from Galveston, only two and one-half miles from navigable stream. Danbury is on the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico R. R. I also have 5,000 acres of land northeast of Houston, a splendid tract to colonize. Price only $17.00 per acre; small amount down, balance long time.

I have 550 acres lying high and dry, with navigable streams on two sides of it; the finest hunting and fishing in Texas; splendid tract to divide into 5-acre tracts, and sell for winter resorts. Price $17.50 per acre. Also 75,000 acres all in one tract, two railroads run through this tract; a beautiful tract; can be cut up and sold in small tracts of 80 to 100 acres at from $40.00 to $50.00 per acre. Must be sold quick; price $8.00 per acre. Reasonable amount down. This is the best bargain in the state of Texas, and will make the party or parties buying it a fortune. As an investment there is nothing better.

I have spent nearly three years in Texas, and am a judge of lands and can give you bargains. My motto is quick sales and small profits.

A nonresident has a fine farm, large frame house, splendid well, barn, wagon, and tool shed, hen house, 87½ acres, nearly all in cultivation; will exchange for clear Colorado Springs or Danver property. Price of farm, $110.00 per acre.

We want another general merchandise store at Danbury, one to handle implements; also a good blacksmith. Will trade or sell you the hotel at Danbury. A hotel man can do well there.

We need a good creamery at Danbury, a splendid location. Milk cream and butter are very high, and any amount of outside range that guarantees a large business to one who understands the business. The party who owns the lumber yard is a wealthy gentleman and wants to retire. You can get a money-maker if you are looking for something of this kind.

I will return to Texas once each month on our regular excursions. My office will be at my residence, 1311 North Wahsatch Ave. Phone Main 724. Come out and let us talk it over. P. O. Box 387. Good hustling agents wanted.

The Children's Corner

"PUPPY"

By LIVINGSTON B. MORSE

ANY as were the animal pets at the white parsonage, there was none who held a firmer hold upon Rob's warm little heart than Puppy.

Puppy was a Newfoundland, a shaggy black and white fellow, with the softest and gentlest of big brown eyes. He had long ago outgrown his name and passed through the various stages of long, shaggy legs and big, awkward paws into sober and sedate doghood. But Puppy he had always been, and Puppy he was likely ever to remain. He was far too large and clumsy to be allowed in the house; so he had a box stall down at the stable all to himself, and there he lived, next door to Prince, the Pony. But when the children went for rambles in the woods and fields, or played about the barn and shed, Puppy was their constant companion; and he enjoyed the walks and games with them every bit as much as did Connie and Rob themselves.

Unlike the majority of dogs, Puppy had a history. His mother was a trick dog in a traveling circus; and he with his little brothers and sisters, had been born in a baggage car en route between Minerva Center and Crockett-big covered hamper, which was carried to the tent in case the "show" remained one night in town. As soon as the act was over and their mother came back to them she nosed them all over thoroughly to make sure that they were safe, and then with many little greetings and grinnings of content they snuggled up to her and all went to sleep, and never a particle of difference did it make to them whether the train were in motion or not.

Puppy was thoroughly accustomed to trains; in fact he knew no other home. The puffings and throbblings, the joltings and joltings, and the shrill whistlings of the engine and the clanging of its bell disturbed him not at all. Sometimes, when a great, fussy engine, snuffing and blowing and snorting, backed up against his car with force to shake it to pieces, Puppy, awakened from his nap, would give a growl of disapproval; but immediately he would turn over, put his head down between his paws, and go blissfully to sleep again as if nothing whatever had occurred to disturb his rest.

When the little dogs were left to themselves they greatly enjoyed playing together on the floor of the box car. They would tumble over and performance. First he made them walk in line up a see-saw; this was very difficult indeed. Some of them always tumbled off, as soon as the board began to tip downward. Then, too, the one whose duty it was to stand in the middle and balance the board usually insisted on sitting down. And when he did so they had to go through it all over again—with infinite care and patience on the part of the trainer—from the very beginning, until they had learned to do exactly what was required of them. And then, when it went well, they were petted and much of.

From time to time the trainer changed the position of the dogs, putting first one and then another in the middle place, endeavoring in this way to discern which of them was the most intelligent and tractable. One of the dogs proved very dull and difficult to teach; not at all bright and active like the others. So one day he was put into a basket and went away with a strange man in one of the little towns through which they passed, and they never saw him again. The other puppies missed him for a time and nosed about the car looking for him in all the cracks and crannies; but they soon grew accustomed to doing without him and went on with their daily lessons and their play just as if he had never been born.

The mother, dressed like a fireman, had been taught to run up a ladder and rescue some cats from an imaginary fire, to ring a bell, fire a pistol, leap through a blazing hoop, and many other tricks. The puppies, too, learned how to jump through a hoop—though it was not a fiery one—to sit up and beg, to hold a bit of cheese or bread on the end of the nose until the signal to eat it was given, to shake hands when asked, and such simple tricks as would prepare them gradually for the more difficult ones to follow.

Puppy was by far the most intelligent of the three. But although he was given the middle place—the place of honor—on the see-saw, he would always insist on barking when he jumped off, as if he were saying: "See how well I did that! Just as I was taught to do it!"

Time went on and the puppies grew bigger and older and wiser. They were great travelers, too; in the course of their short lives they had visited more towns and covered a wider territory than very many persons much older and wiser than they. One day it happened that the box-car in which they were confined was drawn up on the siding in the train yard of a large town in which they were to perform that night. Some one had carelessly left the door of the car ajar, and Puppy, in the course of his rambles, discovered the opening. Being of an inquiring disposition, he proceeded at once to investigate. First he put his nose through, then his paw, and finally he succeeded in pushing the door far enough to leave an opening through which he could pass.

In another moment he had leaped to the ground and was gambolling about the train yard, heedless of the tooting engines and greatly enjoying his taste of liberty. He was in danger of being run over every minute, but he was so thoroughly accustomed to the din of the engines that he felt no fear of them. He rambled about among the long lines of freight cars, dodging the incoming trains, till all of a sudden he realized that he was lost. Then for the first time he became frightened and started on a run to find his car-home.

But there were so many cars, moving slowly back and forth, and they one who might prove a friend, came rushing at him out of the darkness. The baggage-man, who had no suspicion of the presence of the dog, was badly frightened for the moment. His whistle ceased abruptly and his quick eye sought some weapon of defense. But almost at once he realized that Puppy's onrush had been of a friendly character, and that he meant no harm. So the baggage-man made him comfortable on some old sacks in the corner until he should have time to in-

But in spite of his love for Jim, Puppy was not quite happy. He had been brought up to a wandering life upon the railroad, and the habits of his youth clung to him. With wistful eyes he would watch the trains as they passed the little house many times a day; and by and by the desire to be off grew so strong in him that he seized the opportunity to board a freight car, outward bound, and started again upon his travels.

Jim was inconsolable, believing him big dog with him away over to England. So hard as it was to bear, Jim had to make up his mind to give Puppy up.

They were making the journey by slow stages; Puppy overjoyed at being on a train again and Jim very sad and tearful at thought of the inevitable parting. Now it happened that at one point in the road, just as they passed a dangerous curve, there began a heavy up-grade. Their car was the last of the train. The engine and most of the cars had reached the top in safety and had taken a side track on the level to wait until an express that was just due should pass, when without warning the coupling broke and the car, with Jim and his father and Puppy on board, went sliding down the grade, right towards the curve around which the express must shortly pass.

Of course the engineer, away at the front of the train, knew nothing of what had happened. But Jim's father felt the car sliding back and ran to the door to look out. He realized the danger at once, and springing to the top of the car at once applied the brake. But the grade was so steep and the weight of the car so great that the brakes, though they seemed somewhat to slacken the speed, failed to bring the car to a standstill; and just around the curve he could hear the throbbling of the rapidly approaching express.

Every second was precious, yet his brain seemed paralyzed; he could think of nothing to do. Suddenly he remembered, Puppy; he was known by every train man on the line. He shouted to the dog, and hastily untying a red handkerchief from about his neck, thrust it into Puppy's mouth.

"Down there, Puppy. Stop them, stop them!" he shouted, and pointed through the open door to the track.

And Puppy understood. He flew out of the car and around the curve at the top of his speed right toward the oncoming train. Fortunately the engineer recognized him at once as the train-dog, and seeing the red handkerchief in his mouth, realized that something was the matter. He reversed his engine as quickly as possible, and just then the freight car came sliding down upon them.

A collision between them was of course unavoidable; but with the speed of each diminished, it resulted only in a shaking up to the passengers, and no one got off to learn the cause of the shock, and when they heard how Puppy had saved the train, he at once became a hero.

Dr. Lyndon, Rob's father, was among the passengers. He sought out Jim's father and listened to the history of the dog. When he learned that Puppy could not be taken to England, but in spite of his bravery, must be left behind, he offered at once to buy him.

So Jim, with many tears, parted from his friend, and Dr. Lyndon took Puppy home to the white parsonage as a companion for Connie and Rob. From that time his life as a traveler came to an end, and he lives peacefully in the stable, just as if he had never been a great hero and saved a train.

JIM AND PUPPY SOON BECAME FAST FRIENDS.

town—where the circus was billed to appear "for one night only." For the first few weeks of his life, or until he had learned the use of his legs and could trot about for himself, Puppy and his brothers and sisters spent all their time in the box car, and were carried from place to place—wherever the show was to be given. During the performance, in which their mother took part, the puppies were left to themselves, either in the car or in a over, in helpless-looking, roly-poly balls, wailing each other's ears and pretending to bite each other's paws, and having the very best time that puppies know how to have.

But they were very soon to learn that the life of a show dog is by no means all play. When they were about three months old the showman began their training—just a little each day at first—for they were to take part presently with their mother in the regular per-

Chitty Chat Finds a Home in America

By ALICE LOUNSBERRY

It was when Chitty-Chat was very young, a baby almost, that he received his strange-sounding name. He then lived high up along the side of the great rock of Gibraltar. There, as he frisked in the sunshine, he would cry, "Chit, chat, chit, chat, chit," so loud and so fast that his mother even looked at him in astonishment. His voice, indeed, was very shrill.

But Chitty-Chat was beautiful—that is, for a monkey. His coat was silky and his eyes flashed brightly. When he smiled it seemed as if all the world must smile also. The one evil of his nature was his great curiosity; and he was foolish enough to think that he could find out about everything.

Now ships from various parts of the world pass and repass the rock of Gibraltar, and among the sights that visitors often wish to see are the wild monkeys living there. Usually these visitors do not interfere with them in the least. They are content to watch the monkeys jumping about in the trees and swinging their tails in glee, or by their tails, indeed, for such amusement the monkeys need neither swings nor seesaws.

One day a ship anchored in the harbor bearing two great flags, the flag of England and that of the Stars and Stripes. Among its passengers that went ashore to spend the day was an Italian, a poor man who played an organ for a living. He did not follow the other passengers, but climbed straight in the direction of the wild monkeys' home. One might have thought that he had been in Gibraltar before.

Chit, chat, chit, chat, chit," was the noise he heard as he drew near their hiding-places. Suddenly then, out close to him, ran a little monkey, chit-chatting loudest of all. This was not a wise monkey, but he wanted to find out about the stranger. Quick as lightning the Italian threw out a rope, which spread itself and made at the end a loop about the monkey's neck. "Chitty-chat, I'll call you," said the man, as he drew the rope in towards him, while the monkey followed after. The little creature had naturally to walk along with the rope or he would have been strangled by its cruel loop. Then from the trees and the sides of the rock there arose a very loud complaining and chattering from all the little monkey's friends. But they could do nothing. The Italian knew how to handle monkeys. Already he had Chitty-Chat hidden under his coat, and was striding down the rock with his captive.

That, no doubt, was an unhappy time for the monkey. He was almost smothered, and his mouth was held so tight that he could not bite. He could not even move his tail in the free way he had done since his birth. He did not know, besides, where he was going, or by their tails, indeed, for such amusement the monkeys need neither swings nor seesaws.

Now ships from various parts of the world pass and repass the rock of Gibraltar, and among the sights that visitors often wish to see are the wild monkeys living there. Usually these visitors do not interfere with them in the least. They are content to watch the monkeys jumping about in the trees and swinging their tails in glee, or by their tails, indeed, for such amusement the monkeys need neither swings nor seesaws.

Chit, chat, chit, chat, chit," was the noise he heard as he drew near their hiding-places. Suddenly then, out close to him, ran a little monkey, chit-chatting loudest of all. This was not a wise and what kind of a place it was. He also took several long looks at his new master. The name of this man was Antonio Pavara, but the men on the ship called him "Tony," and he had a few ways that did not at all please Chitty-Chat. He used to awake very early, even before the light came, take the monkey up out of his warm bed and begin talking to him in words he did not understand. He made him wear a little cap of paper, and whenever he showed him a penny Chitty-Chat had to hold out his hand, take the penny, and then take off his cap. Tony made him walk on his hind legs much more than he liked doing, and he even had to whirl around after his tail at the sound of the one word, dance.

Chitty-Chat did not dare disobey his master. He had tried that on the days when first he began to teach him these tricks, and they were days without food. Near him, also, Tony had a long, hard stick. Whenever Chitty-Chat looked at it he felt cold with fright. He pleaded his master, however, very well; he was so quick at learning. Sometimes, when they were alone together, Tony scratched his head, which Chitty-Chat liked immensely. But only seldom was he allowed to wander out into the light from the dark little place where they lay to sleep.

At the end of ten days there was a great excitement on the ship. People were running about calling hurrah! hurrah! and other words that Chitty-Chat had not learned. Tony also ran out, forgetting for the instant his charge.

Again Chitty-Chat was curious. Besides, he was unfastened. In an instant he was running here, darting there, all over the ship. He ran up one pair of stairs, then another, and before anyone could catch him he was in the tip-top rigging of the ship. Oh, it was glorious! He saw the sky and the sea as he had never seen them before, and in the distance he saw the Statue of Liberty holding a torch. This is life, this is fun, thought Chitty-Chat, although not exactly in those words.

Where did that little monkey from? shouted the captain, and the passengers looked to see Chitty-Chat swinging in the rigging. Such a ride as he had the rest of the way few monkeys have in this world. He only however, they were kind. They let him slip the monkey under his coat again and go on shore.

The room that Tony lived in was scarcely larger than the one he had came down when the ship anchored at had on the ship. To the window, however, and then because he was ever, there was a lock, and another on the door, so when he fastened Chitty-Chat in there was no way of his getting out. One day when Tony came no money, he said, to pay for the monkey he brought with him a suit of boy's clothing to a girl. In the end, clothes for the monkey and a brass box, which he explained was an organ. "Now, little fellow," he said, "we will go to work." The cap that he put on Chitty-Chat had in it a red feather, and in the coat there were two pockets. "Beni, beni," said Tony in Italian, and Chitty-Chat knew that he was pleased with the way he looked.

That day was the beginning of their wanderings. Wherever they stopped for Tony to play the organ, Chitty-Chat danced for the people, took off his cap, and put the pennies given him in his pockets. What these pennies meant Chitty-Chat never knew, but somehow he learned to associate them with food, for when his pockets held few pennies they had little to eat, but when they were full he and Tony had enough and to spare.

Chitty-Chat had to be very cautious with the girls and boys who followed him along the streets. He would go just near enough to get the pennies and then dodge away quickly. Besides, he took extra good care of his tail whenever he found himself in a crowd. Two things only kept him from being quite happy. Around his neck there was always a collar attached to a long chain, which Tony held; and always they walked away from the trees.

Just before Chitty-Chat found his real home in America, he and Tony had wandered out from a town on an unknown way. There were but few houses along the road, and they were far apart. The monkey's legs ached sadly. He was so tired that Tony carried him on his shoulder. After going through the gateway of the last place they went together, it was still a long walk to the house. Tony started the organ. At once a little boy ran out, charmed by the music. In his hand he held a violin. Chitty-Chat looked at him with his shrewd eyes. He could tell that he was not the kind of a boy who would try to step on his lost. But in a week's time he turned up again, safe and sound, and apparently none the worse for the journey. After that he would take trips from time to time, as the wish came upon him. Sometimes he would be gone a week, but he always came back to be welcomed with open arms by little Jim.

Now, as it happened, Jim's father was an Englishman, and one day he received a letter from a friend at home telling him of a situation to be prepared there. So he made immediate preparations to take his family back to the old country. They were to travel, furniture and all, in a freight car as far as Boston, where they were to take ship. So Jim and Puppy and all the household goods were packed into the freight car. Puppy was to go with them only as far as Boston. What was to become of him then, Jim's father did not know; but it was impossible for a poor man to take the would have danced until he dropped, but a pull at the chain made him remember it was time to beg for pennies. The boy ran to the house, where he returned a lady with him. She told Tony that her son, whom she called Percy, had taken a fancy to his monkey, and that she would like to buy him.

Well, the price that Tony named was so high that it would have carried him back to Gibraltar to catch another monkey. It had to be paid in pennies of gold; still, the little boy said he had that much in his bank. So the bargain was made, and a new life opened up for Chitty-Chat. No more weary trudging, no more hungry nights. Tony whispered to him as they parted, telling him to be good and to follow his new master, and to listen to his sweet music. He even whispered that he now could climb the trees again, and play as he had done at Gibraltar. The collar was slipped from his neck, Tony going away with a tear in his eye.

FOOD FOR JOURNEYS. FIVE six days' ride on the train. Our two small children were not even tired. Our lunch basket contained a bottle of malted milk, one dozen of the best apples I could buy, one dozen oranges, a few bananas and four boxes of graham, oatmeal and other wholesome crackers. At noon, and sometimes for breakfast, we went to the dining car. The rest of the time we ate from our basket, hot water being added for the malted milk. The quantity of fruit used kept the children in fine condition, and was much better than the usual lunches. A box of new kindergarten materials kept the children busy and was given to supply all the other children in the car. Each child had his own little suitcase containing his gown, a pocket wrapper, with slippers to match, and toilet articles. Bedtime came at six, as at home, with the basket supper at five. The porters seemed willing to make up the beds at six, for an extra tip. The ages of the children were how old and what were his feet. He five and six years. J. P. U.

Summit Pikes Peak
Showing Cog Road and Signal Station

Pikes Peak is the landmark of the Rockies, and one of their chief attractions. It stands at an elevation of 14,117 feet above sea level, and over 8,000 feet above Colorado Springs. Ascent is made by the famous Cog road, an example of modern enterprise and engineering skill. At a cost of nearly a million dollars, this road, with an average grade of 846 feet to the mile, has been built to its summit. Comfortably seated in an observation car, you are pushed slowly up this nine miles of steep way, until you have reached one of the highest eminences on the globe. Above the earth, above the clouds; only the sky overhead; all the world beneath. Around you an unobstructed view limited by the bounds of vision. On the west lie the vast Cordilleras, on the east the plains, on the south appear sharp points of the Spanish Peaks. To the north is Long's Peak, Gay's Peak and the Continental Divide. It is an inspiration, a sight that none forget. The trains leave Manitou station, and all are connected. Tickets on sale at any railroad ticket office.
